N. H. RATES DEADLOCK ON AGAIN

CONCORD, N. H., April 13.—The Senate and House are deadlocked on the railroad rate question.

The House received back from the Senate with some amendments, the bill providing for investigation by the public service commission of any and all illegal railroad rates. When the guns of battle came to be the House today, Representative Stevens of Bradford, a member of the special committee on railroad rates, was the only speaker. He went into details on the amendments, and said that the committee and the counsel approved them. But he declared that the House could not to take any further action on the bill till the Senate returned it to the House. The public service commission bill. He appealed to the House to lay the bill on the table till that was done.

The House did this by a unanimous vote. That action drew the line between the Senate and House.

May Increase the Senate.

Having tardily joined with the House in the passage of an act providing for a constitutional convention in December of next year, the New Hampshire State Senate has taken a long step toward placing itself in peace with the people. The constitutional convention act was passed by the House more than a month ago. If the Senate leaders would have been glad to see it sleep forever. They say the constitution is all right and they don't want it tinkered with. The Senate passed the bill today.

One of the constitutional problems already looming big throughout the State is the matter of increasing the number of Senators. The New Hampshire Senate consists of only twenty-four members. In the House there are nearly four hundred. Thirteen men in the Senate have been able to throttle a popular measure carrying the unanimous endorsement of the House of Representatives. A vigorous effort will be made next year to increase the Senate to forty and to have the Senators proportionately represent the population. Under the present constitutional provisions State Senatorial districts are laid out according to "natural wealth."

Session Ends To-morrow.

The lawmakers are going home to-morrow after the longest and, in many respects, the most unsatisfactory session in many years. As the curtain is about to fall the eyes of the State are fastened upon the "Public Utilities Commission bill," passed a long time since by the House, referred in the Senate to the Judiciary Committee and there indefinitely held up by the committee and tinkered amounted, at the request of Counsel Rich of the Boston & Maine, so that it not only institutes a public service board, but "rate" rates controversy.

This "Public Utilities" bill was still in the hands of the Senators at noon today. Mostly on account of the "salary" provisions of the bill these gentlemen have been hobbling on to the P. S. B. bill for more than a week. It may have to be piled away from them. The point is that the railroad rates bill is of no value unless the State has a public service commission to enforce it. A real legislative fuss is still possible if the Senate fails to pass the P. S. B. bill or fails to remove the "Rich" rider from it.

The fact is current, too, that there will be no more scenes of public opinion in the New Hampshire Senate no more snorts for the progressive Governor and his House cohorts. The Senate, observers say, proposes to "be good" to the end of the chapter.

But there are very many citizens of the State who take a pessimistic view of the situation in the Senate. Another case of senatorial sandwich is lettered top and bottom. While the "imperials" are seeking

RUSH BILL FOR DIRECT ELECTIONS ON AGAIN

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Representative Underwood, majority leader in the House, served notice today that the majority intended to adopt an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the popular election of United States Senators before today's session adjourned.

After a lengthy struggle it was agreed that there would be four hours debate on the measure. Some of the Republicans including Minority Leader Mann, Representative Young of Michigan and Madden of Illinois, were inclined to criticise the measure for rushing the bill through the House.

The measure was presented from the committee on Elections by Chairman Bucker of Illinois and was called up immediately. Mr. Young wanted several days in which to consider the bill.

"The country has been talking about the direct election of Senators for four decades," responded Mr. Underwood. "The bill is only twelve lines in length, is well understood, and while we are willing to allow you reasonable debate I may say that the Democrats who are responsible in this house intend to pass this measure today."

Representative Rucker of Missouri opened the debate with a resume of past attempts to secure legislation of this character and the need of changing the system of electing Senators.

At the hour for meeting today of the Ways and Means Committee of the House the Democratic reciprocity bill and the measure containing the farmers' free list were favorably reported.

On the free list bill a report was ordered by a strict party vote, fourteen Democrats standing with Henry Republicans voting against the proposition of free trade. No decision was taken on the vote to report the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

The motion to give this bill a favorable report was made by Mr. McCall, Republican, who is the author of a bill similar to the Underwood measure introduced during the last session. The Canadian reciprocity bill will be over for one day and become the order of business of the House tomorrow.

MELLEN AND BYRNES INSPECT THE DOCKS

Collector of the Port Curtis today took President Mellen of the New Haven and Boston & Maine, Vice President Byrnes and President George S. Smith of the Chamber of Commerce, on a trip around Boston harbor. The party went on board the revenue cutter Windermere, and visited all the principal docks. Collector Curtis explained his ideas as to the proper lines for developing the harbor. It is understood that he favors pushing work in South Boston ahead of East Boston. One of his favorite projects is the remodeling of the Commonwealth Pier, recently leased by the New Haven at a high rental, for the use of the White Star line. Many State officials are understood to be interested in this plan.

HOUSE VOTES FOR SALARY INCREASE

By an overwhelming video vote, the House of Representatives today substituted for an adverse report of the Committee on Public Service, a bill to increase the salaries of members of the Legislature from $750 to $1,000. The Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate each get $2,000 under the bill. Entries were signed by Representative Connolly of Ward 9, Boston. The increases take effect until next year, provided it passes the Senate and is signed by the Governor, all of which seems probable.

M'DONALD IN CHARGE OF APRIL 19 PROGRAM

Councillor Daniel J. McDonald has been designated by the Mayor to have charge of the April 19 celebration of the city. A set of amateur athletic games at North End Park will be the principal event of the day. The prizes are gold watches, silver watches and medals. Entries close for the games on April 16 with Joseph McNamara of the 19 street gymnasium.

RAYNER ATTACKS MEXICAN POLICY

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Declaring that the Monroe doctrine is responsible for the United States military demonstration along the Mexican frontier Senator Rayner of Maryland launched into a bitter attack on the ex-President on the floor of the Senate this afternoon. He bitterly criticised this government's attitude toward Mexico and abandoned the reports that Japan is disturbed in the situation as beneath intelligent consideration.

SHORT FIREMEN BILL HAS BEEN AMENDED

The 5-feet-5-inches bill for firemen was amended by the House of Representatives to-day to overcome Governor Foss's objection to the bill, as amended, allows City Councils and Boards of Selectmen to fix minimum heights for members of fire departments. Originally, the bill cited the minimum height at five feet 5 inches. The bill was recalled from the Governor when he threatened to veto it in the original form. The amendment adopted by the House today has already been adopted by the Senate.

STRANGLER MOTHER'S OWN STORY

Mrs. Clara Russell, who strangled her twelve-year-old daughter in her home at No. 1191 Washington street, Dorchester Lower Mills, while out on parole, was today arraigned before Judge Churchill in the Dorchester court. She was charged with murder. The Judge found probable cause and held her without bail for the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Russell gazed with a vacant stare on the court room men while Clerk Fuller read the complaint charging her with murder. After her brother-in-law, Gilbert Monroe, had testified, telling how he found the little girl dead in bed and of the mother's confession that she strangled her, Judge Churchill asked Mrs. Russell if she had any questions to ask.

"Yes," she replied. "I would like to tell a question."

"Very well, you may," said the court.

"When is my little girl to be buried?" asked the mother.

Judge Churchill ruled the question improper. Later, after court was adjourned, her brother-in-law said her the child was to be buried today.

Charged With the Killing.

Mrs. Russell was brought from the House of Detention in a carriage, accompanied by Patrolman William Doherty of the Fields Corner station. Patrolman Doherty was put in care of Court Officer Alvin W. Phillips and she was taken to the room.

Court opened at 9:30 o'clock. Judge Joseph E. Churchill presided. Clerk Frank Tuttle read the complaint against Mrs. Russell, as follows:

"Clara Russell, it is charged that you did on the twelfth day of April assault and beat Mary Russell with intent to murder by strangling, choking or other means, and that you did strike and beat said Mary Russell and by such assault and beating did kill and murder said Mary Russell."

"Do you wish examination in this court?" asked Judge Churchill.

Mrs. Russell was standing in the pen with her hands grasping the bars, her eyes were fixed and her stare was vacant. She said:

"Did you say I was insane? Ask me questions, is that what you mean?"

Mr. Monroe, who is a teamster, living at No. 6 Miller's lane, told his story:

Story of Brother-in-Law.

"I went to Mrs. Russell's about eight o'clock yesterday morning. I had put in a grate for her the day before. I was ordered by her sister to do it. She also asked me to come in. Then she asked me to deliver some money for her.

"I asked her where Mary was. She said she was dead. She said that she had strangled her with a towel. I then went out and got the officer. I asked her why she had done it and she said the child had been spanked and that she was better off dead. She said some persons said to her that she was not bright, and that she thought she had better put her out of the way.

"Have you any questions to ask?" said Judge Churchill.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Russell. "I would like to ask a question.

"Very well," said the Court, "you may."

"Is that what you mean?" asked Mrs. Russell.

The Judge asked Mr. Russell if she had any others to ask.

"I've got no more questions to ask," she answered.

Patrolman Foley was then called. He said:

Patrolman's Story.

"I went to the house after Mr. Monroe came for me. I saw the child's body on the bed. The neck and lips were discolored. I've got nothing to add to what Mr. Monroe told. My story agrees with his."

Mrs. Russell was given another chance to speak. She said:

"I don't believe I thought she would be better off. I have not felt well at all lately. She was told by some that she was too much and was insulted. I, not being able to defend her, thought she would be better off at rest."

Judge Churchill then instructed Clerk Tuttle to announce that he had found probable cause and held Mrs. Russell without bail for the grand jury.

Mr. Monroe asked permission to talk with Mrs. Russell before she was taken back to the House of Detention. His request was granted. He told Mrs. Russell her child was to be buried at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"How is she to be dressed?" asked Mrs. Russell, "in the same shoddy dress."

"Is the Casket Pretty?"

"Is the casket a pretty one?" she next asked. Then she wanted to know if Mr. Monroe had looked up the funeral and was taking care of it. She asked several more questions about the funeral arrangements.

The body of the child was at the undertaking rooms of R. and E. Gibson in Dorchester. This afternoon it was taken to the Village Congregational Church on River street, Dorchester. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Brooks. Burial was at the Milton cemetery.

The children of her class contributed flowers and many of them attended the funeral services.

OLD CHARLESTOWN TEACHER IS DEAD

Miss Persis M. Whittemore, for thirty-five years a teacher in the Frothingham School, and one of the oldest teachers in the city, died today of pneumonia. She had been ill only four days, and the end was entirely unexpected. Miss Whittemore was one of the older residents of Charlestown, having been born and educated there. She lived for years with her sister at No. 8 Cross street. The funeral will be held Saturday at 1:30 from her home.

ALFRED AUNCHMAN, CONDUCTOR WHO FOUND NECKLACE

FOSS ATTACKS MOTH POLICY

Governor Foss this afternoon sent a special message to the Legislature, in which he severely criticises the work of the State Forester's department in suppressing the gypsy and brownfail moths, and refuses to approve the appropriation of $150,000 a year granted the forester for this work by the Legislature of 1909, which was to run for three years.

The Governor recommends that the State Forester's department consolidated with the Fish and Game department under a single head. Accompanying the message he submitted a report by Clinton S. Sewell, as expert, on the gypsy and brownfail moth work, and says of the report:

"Mr. Sewell finds that the public is not getting a satisfactory return at present on the vast expenditure of public funds, which average nearly $1,000,000 yearly.

"He finds that the State forester's office is inefficient and that the work done by sides and towns at the expense of the State is wasteful.

"The State Inspector's reports indicate that in many towns and cities the money is worse than wasted.

"In my opinion all or nearly all future work should be limited to the frontier of the infested territory to prevent the spread of the pest. The federal government is suppressing the pest in this manner and doing it successfully."

$5,000 NECKLACE RESTORED

Mr. F. L. Roppin of Newton, who is visiting the family of H. H. Thordike of No. 347 Beacon street, lost a necklace containing eighty-one pearls and one diamond in Boston yesterday, was offered one if he might found out that the collector or conductor had found it yesterday and restored the property.

Mrs. Roppin, with three strings of pearls around her neck, went to the Museum of Fine Arts from the home of Mr. Thordike. She went and registered on a car. When she got back she missed the pearls. They are worth $5,000.

Conductor's Own Story.

This is the story of Alfred H. Aunchman, the young conductor, who found the string of pearls worth a fortune:

"I left the subway at Tre-fo yesterday afternoon on an Oak Street car. There were ten or a dozen persons on the car. After we had passed the Museum of Fine Arts I saw a necklace lying on the floor of the car.

"I picked it up and slipped it into my pocket. It was seven or eight inches long. I didn't think much of it at the time, considering that it was a cheap necklace. Later I took it out of my pocket and looked at it. I saw there was a diamond on the string, and I knew a diamond when I saw it.

"I went forward to the motorman, Dan McDonald, and showing him the necklace said:

"'Look at the cheap necklace I found.'

"'How much do you think it's worth?' asked Dan.

Gave Gems to Starter.

"'Well,' I replied, 'I think it is worth about $2,000.'

"'I guess you're right,' said Dan.

"I went to the barn and turned the necklace over to the starter. Another day I will really did not know how much the necklace was worth until you told me today."

"Do you expect a reward?" the conductor was asked.

"Why, would I?" he replied. "I found a pocketbook containing $50 last year and got $15."

Mrs. Roppin, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Thordike, went to No. 34 Berkeley street today, identified the necklace and took it away with them.

Reward for Finder.

Superintendent Sullivan asked if a reward had been left for the honest conductor.

"We are not allowed to give out any information here," he replied.

Aunchman is twenty-eight years old, is married, has been with the railroad company seven years and lives at 34 Dighton street, Brighton. Mrs. Roppin said earlier in the day that she would give a suitable reward for the return of the necklace.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, April 13.—Enthusiastic over yesterday's victory and with much better conditions underfoot, the Braves opened this afternoon in the hope of seeing Fred Tenney's Rustlers duplicate their feat of scaring out Brooklyn. They looked for a good, clean game like yesterday's performance.

Tenney picked Al Mattern in lead off against the Dodgers, and he had a second string to his bow in Sam Brook, who appeared to be in prime condition. Dubuc picked George Bell, his premier right-hander, to go on the mound. Graham and Rucker were booked to do the catching again. Both "Pirates" Graham and Manager Tenney received an ovation when they appeared on the grounds, their work in winning yesterday's game being duly appreciated by the fans.

NATIONAL PARK, Washington, April 13.—The surprising victory of yesterday's game over the Washington Senators didn't think it possible for the Senators to overcome a lead of four runs and win out over the "Speed Boys." As a result another big crowd was on hand this afternoon to see the second battle. Jim Groom was slated to work for the locals, while Cleotis went in for the Red Sox.

The weather continued clear and cool, but somewhat better conditions prevailed than yesterday, as it was slightly warmer.

Owner John T. Taylor was an interested spectator at the opening game yesterday, and his comments to his players were not at all pleasing. In fact the angered owner of a star chamber session with his manager, Patsy Donovan, early to-day and an immediate shake-up in the line-up.

Captain Wagner was out in shape to play his best game, and he was succeeded by Carrigan in left field. Jack Kleinow, the veteran catcher, has been shipped to his home in New York until his injured finger is all right to play.

Myers, the recruit first baseman, came down from Boston to-day and was at the grounds this afternoon ready to hold down the initial sack. Williams, the present third baseman, is a substitute catcher and will be forced to go behind the bat if Madden should appear to be ill.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—This being the anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's birth, Senator Bacon of Georgia, to-day offered in the Senate and had passed unanimously consent a bill to appropriate $100,000 for the erection of a monument in Washington to the memory of Jefferson, funds from our previous decision.

HOTELS TO BE ALLOWED BUT ONE LICENSE

Stores Must Be Separate, Board Says in Statement Given Out To-day.

The Licensing Board to-day made clear its position on the "Bar and Bottle" law which goes into effect May 1 unless repealed by the Legislature. The commissioners say that they will not issue licenses for the sale of liquors over the bar and for sales by bottle in the same premises, under any circumstances.

They also say that they will not grant bottle licenses to inn holders, which means hotels.

The liquor dealers had reason to hope that they could be partitioning off part of their places of business into bodiless legality in both and retain the wholesale trade, but the board makes it plain that to hold licenses of the first and fourth classes the two stores must be entirely separate.

The statement of the board follows:

Premises Must Be Separate.

Before the passage of chapter 476, Acts of 1910, the Licensing Board carefully discussed the provisions of the act and unanimously agreed that the intention of the act was that a license to sell liquor "to be drunk on the premises" and a license to sell liquor "not to be drunk on the premises" could not be exercised in the same place or premises. It acted almost immediately on that interpretation of the law and after May 3, 1910, will not issue licenses in fact, every applicant for a change of location or for an enlargement of his premises will be put to proof under oath of the two licenses he would operate. This position of the board was clearly stated in the annual report of the Governor dated December 28, 1910. Previous to one report, realizing the difficulties that many licensees would experience because of the new law and in order to ascertain the precise wishes of the licensees every licensee holding licenses of the first and fourth classes was asked certain questions by the board in a printed communication, a copy of which is as follows:

Dealers Asked for Facts.

To the Holders of Liquor Licenses of the First and Fourth Classes.

In order that it may carry out the provisions of Chapter 476, Acts of 1910 (the so-called Bar and Bottle Bill) with justice to all interested, the Licensing Board asks you to cooperate with it by answering the following questions at your earliest convenience.

For how long a time have you had a liquor license?

For how long a time have you had your present location?

Have you a lease in favor of your present premises or are you a tenant at will?

When did your lease begin?

When does it end?

Is there any provision for its renewal?

If so, for how long a time?

What proportion (approximately) of your business is First Class?

What proportion (approximately) of your business is Fourth Class?

The probable class of license will you probably like to apply for the year beginning May 1, 1911?

Do you intend to ask the Board's consent to purchase an additional license in order to have two licensed places one operating under a license of the First Class, the other under a license of the Fourth Class?

The information above requested is for the private use of the Board and it is desired that the Board may have as many facts as possible before receiving applications for licenses for the year 1911-1912.

The Board's Ruling.

In answer to the above inquiries, a very large majority of the licensees replied, stating their probable wishes, and from these licensees have made applications for the only one license in one place. In many cases licensees have wished to continue the first and fourth class licenses or have obtained from the board permission to buy an additional license and have applied for licenses to be conducted in places absolutely separated from each other with separate and distinct entrances from the street.

After careful consideration of the conditions controlling the different licenses outstanding a large amount of additional work, and after a great majority of the applications for licenses for 1911-1912 and been received, considered and discussed and were ready to be acted upon by this board, a formal request was made to us on April 7, 1911, to construe the fact in a way different from our previous decision.

PATROLMAN'S $5 RECEIVED

The anonymous policeman who declared in favor of Mr. O'Meara in the Sunday AMERICAN, saying that he told the truth, called to ensure that the AMERICAN does not then offered $5 for charity if the AMERICAN printed his letter, came across to-day with the $5.

A letter containing a $5 bill, mailed at the Roxbury station at noon to-day, reached the AMERICAN office this afternoon. The writer, who did not sign his name, requested that the $5 be sent to the Commonwealth Home on Quincy street, Dorchester. The money was immediately sent to the home by a messenger from this office.

This is the policeman's letter:

CHANGES TO BE MADE IN CUSTOM HOUSE

James F. Curtis, assistant secretary of the treasury, conferred to-day with Edward F. Graves, who will take office as Surveyor of the Port on June 15, about appointments in the custom house. Mr. Curtis told Mr. Graves what the Taft administration wants and said there would be no wholesale dismissals as the result of the recent investigation. There will be some changes, however. New men will go in about July 1. Mr. Curtis is retired social visits from Police Captain Armstrong, who served the department as special agent for about six months, and from Arthur D. Hill, former District Attorney of Suffolk County.

HUMAN LEG PICKED UP IN A DOORWAY

NEW YORK, April 13.—The police are trying to solve the mystery surrounding the finding of a human leg, carefully wrapped in linen, in the doorway of an apartment house at No. 2436 Eighth avenue. The leg was discovered by Thomas Delaney, janitor of the building, who stumbled over it as he entered the hall. Around the leg was wrapped a piece of wrapping paper. It has been suggested that the leg may be from the same corpse as the head and foot found in a cigar box on April 2.

LORIMER CONDEMNED BY N. H. SENATORS

CONCORD, N. H., April 13.—By a vote of sixteen to six the State Senate this afternoon concurred with the action of the National Senate in allowing Senator William Lorimer of Illinois to sit in that body. The House has already passed a corresponding resolution and thus favoring Lorimer seat.

John B. Cross of Concord.

Jonathan M. Cheney of Ashland.

Charles H. Bedford of Mont Vernon.

John Tucker of Hopkinton.

George S. Reeves of Lebanon.

Senators Alvin B. Cross, John H. Cross, Jonathan M. Cheney and Charles H. Bedford are four of the famous "Thirteen Bandsmen" who represented the New Hampshire Senate at a testimonial gathering on Monday night, April 10, at the Bellevue. Bedford, at which four opening gibs charmed the eyes of the ladies with sinuous dancing and their ears with fine singing.

TARDY RESPONSE BY N. H. SENATE TO THE PEOPLE'S DEMANDS

brighter things in the mirror, those who are not so optimistically inclined see a darker side where the silver lining isn't so prominent. These citizens still assert that the Rehels is a doubtful proposition and will remain so until the "sixteen" are cleaned out. These sixteen Senators are the ones who blocked the progressive legislation.

Girlie-Girlie Senators Scored.

While the public attention is centred chiefly on the State House in the closing hours of the present session, the people of the State are far from forgetting the exposures made in the AMERICAN of the attendance of thirteen of the recreant Senators at the notorious dancing-girl dinner at the Rockingham House in Portsmouth when thirteen of the obstructionists ratified their action in strangling every popular measure that had been urged for adoption into law. The wave of indignation and of outraged public decency has swept over the entire State, and in every gathering of those who stand for purity among the people's servants the girlie-girlie Senators are being severely condemned. The general demand is that they be remembered and defeated at the next election.

The executive committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Hampshire met to Manchester and adopted resolutions excoriating the Senators for the disgrace and reproach they had brought upon the State and the opportunity they had brought upon the Legislature.

The action of the committee is important, as it represents the convictions of thousands of women in every section of the State. Mrs. Allen R. Richardson of this city presided. On motion of one of the members, a discussion was started of the resolutions made in last Sunday's AMERICAN. The speakers were unsparing in their criticism of the Senators who were present at the Portsmouth beer-whiskey-cocktail-dancing girl dinner.

W. C. T. U. Indignant.

The result of the meeting was the adoption of the following resolutions:

In view of the report concerning the recent banquet held in Portsmouth by certain members of our Senate,

Resolved, That we, members of the Executive Committee of the State Women's Christian Temperance Union, hereby express our keen regret and indignation over the conduct which brings disgrace to our State, and reproach to our law-making body. In the name of purity and righteousness, we heartily unite in the State-wide condemnation of such orgies.

The printing of the facts about the conditions in the Senate in the AMERICAN has evoked praise and thanks from civic leaders all over the State. Citizens here to-day seconded the sentiment of Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's, who declared in a speech at Boston, that the AMERICAN was the only paper that had the courage to tell New Hampshire people the truth about its Senators.

Attorney Clarence E. Carr of Andover, to-day declared that the public is indebted to the AMERICAN for its exposure of the senatorial traitors. He said his personal opinion was that the AMERICAN had again evidenced its value as a staunch supporter of the people's rights in knowing up the Senate at this time.

Praise for the American.

"I like the truth, and I think most New Hampshire people do," said Attorney Carr. "The AMERICAN has been giving facts. It's about time to call a spade a spade. And if it's a useless spade, they why not call it an old shovel."

The Senate majority will be roasted unmercifully to-night when the House of Representatives holds its big mock session, to signalize the closing of this year's sitting of the Legislature. Many of the House members have prepared to ridicule the Senators in the proper way. The Senators are to be grilled from start to finish.

One of the resolutions adopted in connection with the mock session follows:

Resolved, that a joint committee of the House and Senate be appointed by the respective presiding officers with advisory powers vested in the upper branch (Senate) to secure a suitable number of chorus girls to entertain the members.

If the program comes off as planned, we will make a public exhibition of the Senators who have blocked every big measure passed by the House," said one representative to-day. The proceedings will of course be ridiculous, but all the same the ridicule is going to show up some of the real facts. Look out for a spanky time for the Senate.

Pender In "Excuse Club."

Senator John Pender, sixty-eight years old, was the only member added to the "Excuse Club to-day. He was one of those at the Portsmouth dinner.

"They say you deeked being at the dinner," an American reporter said to him.

The Senator was evasive.

"Ah, ho, I saw you coming," he said. "You can't write me up. I don't care a rap. I don't say anything. I don't say whether I was there or not. I just hoof my head straight and go where want to go. No, sir, I don't care a rap."

Biggest Credit Announcement.

N. Solomon, organizer of the 99c famous store, has to-day's AMERICAN, page 2, one of the largest credit announcements ever published in any paper in the world.

PRAISES BOSTON AMERICAN FOR N. H. SENATE EXPOSURE

I want to say that the people of this State are signally pleased at the attitude of the AMERICAN in telling the facts about conditions in the Senate and in supporting the reform measures we incorporated in our platforms. We want the people to know what their public servants are doing. The Boston & Maine and lesser interests got into print in both New Hampshire and Boston. But the real leaders for good principles found their motives misjudged and their efforts throttled in the public press.—Attorney Edward C. Niles of Concord, one of the leaders in the newly formed State Citizens' Association of New Hampshire.

A. C. DELANO, WHO IS AFTER CONTEST PRIZE

A. C. DELANO

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR BIG CONTEST

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Next Sunday, April 16, the Contest Editor will have another special Easter announcement to make to all candidates and their friends in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest.

This announcement will interest every candidate from Eastport, Me., down to Western Connecticut and from the Berkshires to the tip of Cape Cod. It will have a tremendous bearing on the Contest itself. All candidates need to get their Sunday AMERICAN as early as possible next Sunday in order to see this announcement promptly.

That is all the Contest Editor wishes to say to-day about this announcement. He promises that it will be interesting.

Commercial travelers and secret society men make good candidates in a Contest of this nature because they meet so many people. A shining example of this is A. C. Delano of Lawrence. Mr. Delano is among the first fifteen leaders in District Three. He has been a commercial traveler for the past twelve years. He also has strong secret society affiliations. He founded Lawrence Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and is naturally one of its leading members.

Mr. Delano is also a member of Lowell Lodge of Odd Fellows and of the D. O. K. K. of Boston. These connections, in addition to the number of people he meets in his travels, give him a wide field of votes and subscriptions from which to draw. Mr. Delano is a hustler, and his energetic campaign is proven by his high position in the District Three list. He says:

"I find that the way to get votes and subscriptions is to keep after them. You can't get 'em by standing still. This contest is the greatest ever. I don't know just how I am coming out, of course, but I have a strong bunch that, when the votes are all counted next June, a man by the name of Delano is going to be one of the big winners. Shouldn't wonder if I captured the capital prize at that."

Fine Suits

Large purchases of fine Suits, custom made and made to order, at liberal concessions from original prices, in some instances saving to customers from 5.00 to 15.00 on a suit.

Chandler & Co. were never in a stronger position on fine suits than just at the present time. With a knowledge of the falling off of the orders from the great Western retailers on suits of this character, and using this knowledge to advantage, they secured concessions on numerous models made up from the finest materials and by several of the best manufacturers in New York. Many of the new models were received the early part of this week.

The transactions involved many hundreds of yards of fabrics, trimmings and materials. The choicest of models were selected, after which the suits were made, and the low prices at which they were obtained make it possible for Chandler & Co. to present

Fine Tailored and Dress Suits

At 25.00, 35.00 and 45.00

The most beautiful garments produced this Season—all made from the finest of fabrics—all finished with the most expensive braids, silks, satins and trimmings—all made after the newest models and most assured styles, and by the best workers.

Women who dress well know that the garment which shows individuality and lends special distinction to the wearer must have for its foundation the proper corset.

This is the real test of any corset

Each La Vida model is exquisitely made for a specific purpose, and, because fashion decrees that skirt lines must be long, the hips subdued and the effect of slenderness produced, the demands upon the corset are greater than ever before for fit, shape and resiliency.

To meet these requirements the highest product of master designers, the latest and most advanced style features, and the highest excellence of hand-workmanship, must be employed, all of which is embodied in the construction of La Vida corsets.

La Vida Corsets

MISS SLATER..... PAYS $20 FINE

Miss Esther Slater, dashing automobilist and heir to the Slater millions, paid $20 in two ten-dollar gold certificates into the Quincy Court today after pleading nolo contendere to a charge of overspeeding her automobile in Blue Hill avenue, Milton.

The young woman was not the least bit disconcerted during the ordeal. She came to the Court House driving a big touring car in which were three women and a young man. They entered expectantly and were greeted by a crowded courtroom. They took seats on a bench near the court officers' chair.

Pending a conference between Superintendent of Police Pierce and Miss Slater's attorney, Paul R. Blackman, Miss Slater and her friends giggled so loudly that Court Officer Harden signalled them to remain quiet. This seemed to amuse the party and while they remained quieter their levity was not diminished.

When Miss Slater was called to the prisoners' dock she stepped forward jauntily and smilingly faced Judge Thomas Dunbar Pratt, special justice. Clerk Lyons read the charge of overspeeding. In a low voice the young woman entered her plea.

She then gazed inquisitively at the Justice, who looked directly at the clerk and said: "Twenty dollars."

Miss Slater took a gold-framed pocket book from a silver chatelaine bag and extracting two yellow-backs rendered over and smilingly handed them to Clerk Lyons inquiring at the time "Is that all, please?"

Clerk Lyons said "yes, thank you." She stepped back to her friends and the giggling was resumed. The party then left the court room.

On their first appearance in the court a highway robbery trial was in progress and following that came the hearing of an assault case. Miss Slater was apparently interested in these trials and explained to her friends the meaning of different things as they passed, thus indicating that her recent conference with Commissioner O'Meara was not entirely fruitless.

No evidence was introduced by the prosecution, a conference between Miss Slater's counsel and the police superintendent resulting in an agreement. Therefore Policeman William F. Fallon, whom Miss Slater accused of making the arrest through spite, was not called upon to testify.

Miss Slater and her friends came into court in dashing automobile costumes, featuring veils and flirting gloves. After the court proceedings they started on a ride.

LETTUCE SALAD A L'AUTO CRASH

If a nice crisp lettuce salad with cream dressing is served to Harvard students in Memorial Hall to-day it may be or it may not be the result of certain early morning events that took place in Cambridge which resulted in so much wreckage that it can't all be got in the opening paragraph.

For instance:

Bunch of students, seniors, from the swell Dunster Hall were wrecked. Mostly as to feelings.

Automobile, in which they toured smashed.

Heavily laden milk wagon torn up. Likewise contents.

Big load of lettuce, fresh from the farm, buried into the street and mixed with the milk.

The automobile was the property of Charles Frederick Frothingham, Jr., of Babylon, L. I. Mr. Frothingham, junior, is a senior. He lives in Dunster, where a good deal of the midnight electric light is dissipated in fighting the boys to bed after they have been out studying sociological problems.

Tearing Off Speed.

Mr. Frothingham and some of his fellows were out quite late last night, and they swung back into Cambridge along a lit de sleep before taking up to-day's strenuous duties in the way of brain work. They had reached the corner of Lexington avenue and Brattle street, at the time of the night the automobile trap is not in action so relentlessly as during the day and one may tear off a small bit of speed without great danger of the Cambridge police.

Charles Viles of Waltham is a perfectly peaceful milk raiser. He had reached the corner of Lexington avenue and Brattle street when there flashed a light before him. Then there was a crash. A big touring car, like a Cyclops of the night, leaped at the milkman. Debris and milk filled the air.

Milk pained for none," remarked Frothingham.

"I'm going to stick to beer," said a companion.

What Viles said can't be printed.

Make a Hit with Lettuce.

The Hittinger brothers raise lettuce in Belmont. They have always made a hit with it. Officer, he's in again! Their wagon, piled high with nice fresh bunches trailed along into Cambridge about an hour after the auto-milkman mix-up.

Everything was still in the street except the students. The driver of the lettuce wagon swerved to one side to get out of the ruins. A limb reached down from a tree, caught a rope that held the left rear lamp in the wagon, yanked it loose and piled the lettuce on the milk.

Some of the clever detectives of the Cambridge force tried to straighten the matter out early to-day, but stated as though they would have to call for help.

GUILD'S NAME SENT TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Taft sent to the Senate today the nomination of former Governor Curtis Guild of Massachusetts to be United States Ambassador at St. Petersburg. Mr. Bacheller, present Ambassador to Russia, was nominated for Ambassador to Turkey.

It is learned that when Mr. Guild went to Washington early this week, ostensibly to attend a meeting of the Forestry Association, he discussed the prospective nomination with the President and signified his willingness to accept the St. Petersburg mission. He talked also with the Massachusetts Senators and no pains were subsequently lost at that time.

Start in Few Weeks.

It is understood that he does not expect to start for his new post for a few weeks.

President Taft has sent Mr. Guild's name under consideration for a diplomatic post more than two years. At the time of Mr. Taft's inauguration the ex-Governor was much discussed in connection with the Italian mission.

Last Summer he was designated as a special ambassador to represent this government at the centennial of the Mexican republic and discharged his duties in a manner most acceptable to the Mexicans. This was very pleasant to President Taft, who sought more to bring about arrangements by which the ex-Governor could be given a good position abroad. Mr. Guild mastered the Spanish language after his appointment and won many encomiums from the Mexicans for the readiness with which he spoke on public occasions in their vernacular.

Russian Post Is Desirable.

The President several times in private conversation emphasized Mr. Guild's qualifications for diplomatic service.

The embassy of St. Petersburg is one of the most desirable places in the diplomatic service. Only the embassies of London, Paris, Berlin and Rome are regarded as better, and some would not include Rome in that category. The last Massachusetts man to serve as ambassador at St. Petersburg was George von L. Meyer, now Secretary of the Navy, who was transferred from Rome during the period of the Russo-Japanese war.

Mr. Bacheller, going to Constantinople, will succeed Oscar S. Straus, who was secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor under President Roosevelt. Mr. Straus resigned the ambassadorship to Turkey several months ago.

FORMER GOVERNOR GUILD, NAMED FOR RUSSIAN EMBASSY

CURTIS GUILD, JR.

PRICE OF COAL HELD UP HERE

Coal dealers in Boston are keeping prices stationary while they are dropping in other cities. Some of the dealers say they think there will be a drop in a short time, while others announce that they anticipate no change.

As the situation in coal now stands, people in Boston are paying twenty-five cents more a ton for most grades of coal than are the people in other Massachusetts cities, notably Springfield.

40,000 TROOPS FOR WINE WAR

PARIS, April 13.—Forty thousand soldiers in five military garrisons about Paris were ordered under arms ready to march into the city today as the climax of the champagne riots. The rioters are struggling against 10,000 soldiers already on the ground. The disturbances are spreading.

Three thousand additional soldiers were sent to the departments of Marne and Aube today to help subdue the rioters.

The cause is the fight of the champagne growers and the dangers already threatening the industry in the riotous districts.

The whole trouble in the Marne is in reality a political one, a decree having been issued by the Socialist Premier Caillaux, distributing part of the champagne tax among political soldiers, the troops attempting to prevent the distribution being met with showers of shots and missiles and a pitched battle.

With drums sounding the charge the mounted troops rode down the rioters at the point of the sword. Many were trampled under the hoofs of the horses. The Duc de Montebello, on the outskirts of the city, rallied the soldiers and firemen and turned back the mob. A portion was placed in the castle for its protection.

As more of the soldiers poured into the cities the feeling subsided. Many Municipalities of the centers of vineyards were sacked.

Women and children are fighting side by side with the men. The women heeded the call to arms upon seeing burning houses from the windows of their homes. Many of them are now behind fighting. Young children throw missiles at the troops from the roofs of houses which wounded many soldiers.

The criminal element, taking advantage of the opportunity, is pillaging on every side. The cafes being supplied indiscriminately and thousands are homeless, their dwellings having been burned by the rabble. Several conflagrations are reported in the streets and the torch applied to the cafes. Paris is in a state of turmoil and disorder and made this into bombs.

The Place de Vendome and the streets are littered glass and wreckage of cars. The Vendome hotel, which during the night to oppose the entrance of more soldiers. A red flag was placed on top of the barricade and many of the rioters, inflamed by the wine after which they are fighting, sang revolutionary songs and defied the government to suppress the disorder.

Similar conditions prevail at Cosmieres, Marieuil and Damery.

LEGISLATOR CALLED TO MILK HEARING

CONCORD, N. H., April 13.—Representative Joseph L. Schurman received a summons to-day to appear in Boston before the Federal grand jury, which is investigating the milk situation in Boston and "New England." He left at once for Boston. The investigation was ordered by Attorney General Wickersham and is being conducted by Boston under direction of Special Assistant Attorney-General George R. Greig. It will look into alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust law.

SOLD WATERED MILK.

AYER, April 13.—Daniel Fletcher, a farmer in Middleton, was fined $100 in the local court on complaint of the Revere Board of Health for selling watered milk. He paid the fine.

"L" WILL GIVE NEW TRANSFERS

As a result of a conference to-day between Mayor Fitzgerald and M. C. Brush of the Boston Elevated road, the company agreed to issue transfers at three new points from the surface cars.

These improvements in the service, which will be in operation within a week, make eight new points where the Elevated has consented to issue transfers. The concessions granted to-day provide:

That passengers on the South Boston cars which go through Copley square from Huntington avenue to Massachusetts avenue, thence to Boylston street, will be given transfers to proceed further west on Huntington avenue, and also an opportunity for return journey.

That passengers on Columbus avenue, north of Massachusetts avenue, will be given an opportunity to transfer the same as those on Tremont street and Shawmut avenue cars in order that they may have a choice for reaching Cambridge.

At Eglseton square passengers will be given an opportunity to transfer to Dudley or Roxbury cars for Columbus avenue. Beaver street cars to and from the Elevated will run through Franklin Park passengers reaching Forest Hills without going to Dudley street.

In addition to these new transfer points the Elevated has already agreed to issue transfers at Huntington avenue and Massachusetts avenue, Tremont and Shawmut avenue, River street, Old State House and from tunnel cars and at Northampton street.

WOMEN CAPTURE "JACK THE PEEPER"

Mrs. Mabel A. Samsel of Library street, Chelsea, told to-day how she chased "Jack the Peeper" in the street last night and caught him, but before assistance reached her and her daughter the fellow broke away. The police are looking for the man. "This man has been around the house peeping through windows for several weeks," said Mrs. Samsel. "Last night when I saw him looking through the dining room window I went out on the back piazza, and as I did he went to the front of the house. He came back to the side windows and was just looking through one when I called my daughter Lillian and we chased him down Library street toward Broadway. When we caught him my daughter screamed. No assistance came, so the man escaped.

COTTON MILL MEN IN THIRD SESSION

The third session of the annual convention of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers opened today in Huntington Hall, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The meeting was largely attended, and subjects of importance to the general trade were discussed. Several papers were read relative to the growth of the cotton industry and the co-operation between the Federal government and the mills. Charlotte, N. C., spoke on "Arbitration," Boston on "Condition of Contracts," and Albert F. Beals of Boston spoke to "Co-operation Between Departments of the Federal Government and Textile Manufacturers."

JOHN H. WRIGHT DEAD.

John H. Wright, for thirty-five years instructor of manual training and 270 pupils at the Perkins Institute for the Blind, died today at his home, No. 701 East Broadway, South Boston. The funeral will be Sunday afternoon from the Perkins Institute.

GLOVER APPEAL UP NEXT WEEK

The second fight to break the will of Clarence F. Glover, the murdered Waltham manufacturer, begins next Thursday at East Cambridge before Samuel D. Elmore, executor of the estate, will introduce a motion asking that the jury be discharged and that the case be heard only before a single justice of the Supreme Court. Lawyer Elmore offers this motion yesterday, but the court refused to accept it until it comes in next week in East Cambridge.

Glover left an estate worth about $50,000, of which the widow received the bulk during her life, the balance of the property going to Mr. Glover's brother Seymour, and to Mrs. Seymour Glover, Albert, Norman, Arthur and William sought to break the will, and have named as their famous counsel Judge Sherman McIntire in the Probate Court at which charges were made that Glover had been murdered by one with the knowledge of a member of the family. McIntire allowed the will, and the Supreme Court granted the appeal of Mrs. Glover for a new trial.

CECILIA SOCIETY CONCERT

Attention is called to the fact again that the concert of the Cecilia Society and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall to-morrow (Friday) night, when Harold Bauer will be the soloist, will begin promptly at 7.30 o'clock. This early hour is necessary on account of the length of the work.

CLOSING LENTEN SERVICES BEGIN

The first of the closing services of Lent, the chanting of the office of the Tenebrae, was solemnized at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross last night. To-day, Holy Thursday, at 9 o'clock, Archbishop O'Connell, in pontifical robes, celebrated solemn high mass, assisted by the clergy of the Cathedral and by visiting clergy.

Following the mass came the procession to the repository, a side altar wherein is kept over Good Friday the sacred host.

The Tenebrae will be chanted this evening at 7.30, and then on Good Friday morning the mass of the presanctified will be said at 8.

On Good Friday at 3 p. m. there will be the ceremony of the way of the cross, and at 7 p. m. the Tenebrae will be chanted for the last time. The service Good Friday evening begins at 7 p. m., as there will be a sermon preached by Rev. Fr. Alexis, C. P., on the passion and death of the Saviour.

On Holy Saturday the blessing of the new fire, the paschal candle and font will begin at 8 a. m., followed by solemn high mass.

On Easter Sunday morning the solemn pontifical mass will begin at 10.15 and Archbishop O'Connell will officiate. The sermon on Sunday morning will be preached by Canon Oliver Higgins of London, Eng., who is visiting in this city.

On Easter Sunday afternoon the solemn vesper service begins at 4 p. m. and Rev. Dr. Charles J. Sullivan will deliver the sermon.

THIN FOLKS MADE FAT.

The Way Samose Works Its Wonders—Guaranteed by Houghton & Dutton Co.

More than half the readers of the Boston American would give almost anything to be plump and rosy instead of thin and scrawny.

Physicians and chemists for years have studied the problem of making a flesh-forming food, but it is only within the last few months that a bright man discovered the prescription that, taken with the daily meals gave a positive increase in flesh. In fact, it was so certain in its action that a guarantee was attached to each package, stating that if weight did not increase as a result of using it, the purchase price would be refunded.

This preparation is now put up in convenient form for use under the name of Samose.

Houghton & Dutton Co. have secured the agency in Boston for Samose, and as the percentage of satisfactory results from the use of this prescription is so nearly one hundred per cent., they feel there is no risk in offering to refund the money if Samose does not do all that is claimed for it.

Everybody that is thin and out of health should begin today the use of Samose with a guarantee like this.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

MAYOR ANSWERS SCHOOL CRITICS

Second class construction for elementary schools in the suburbs of the city was defended by Mayor Fitzgerald to-day in replying to Franklin H. Wentworth, who charged that Boston's pupils were in fire peril.

Mr. Wentworth, who is secretary of the National Fire Protection Association, asserted at the dinner of the American Institute of Architects at New York last night that the Schoolhouse Commissioners had deliberately chosen a type of construction that was not fireproof.

Replying to Wentworth, Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"Second class construction was adopted at the suggestion of Chairman Logue, a practical builder of experience, and one who favors it because it is much more economical and affords equally as much protection against fire.

"We are not building second class construction buildings in the suburbs. It will be found that the cities of Cambridge, Everett, Medford and Brookline, not to mention many other neighboring cities and towns, adopt this plan of construction. I would like to have Mr. Wentworth or any other architect point out any modern school which we are building as a fire trap.

"The criticism comes from the architects who are denied big fees through the policy of the commissioners in using second class construction. I am perfectly satisfied with the manner and the work of the Schoolhouse Commission. We have a builder of experience, an architect of standing and a roofer, competent through years of service in the supervision and construction of buildings. Mr. Wentworth's fears are unwarranted."

ICE PRICES STAY UP DESPITE ABUNDANCE

Despite the long, cold Winter the price of ice will not be reduced according to the rate cards issued by the leading ice companies. A twenty-five-pound piece will be delivered in the ice-chest for 10 cents, 50 pounds for 15 cents and 100 pounds for 25 cents. A slight reduction in these prices may be obtained by contracting for ice by the month. In that manner the family ice chest will be supplied as follows: Twelve pounds a day for $1.50 a month; 18 pounds per day for $2.25 per month; 24 pounds per day for $3, and 36 pounds a day for $4.25.

SPEAKER WALKER THANKS FOLLOWERS

Speaker Walker of the House of Representatives gave out this statement to-day regarding the direct nomination bill reported in the House yesterday: "I wish to congratulate the committee on election laws for the work they have done on the direct nomination bill. That bill has my entire approval. I trust it will be adopted promptly by both branches for I feel sure that it meets a reasonable public demand."

BROOKLINE WOMAN IN AUTO COLLISION

An auto owned by William F. The car was being driven by Mrs. Sheddon while her husband were its only occupants. Neither was injured. The running board and one of the rear wheels of the auto were smashed.

LYNN GIRL, WHO SECRETLY WEDDED RICH MERCHANT

MARGUERITE S. MORRIS

LYNN WAITRESS RICH MAN'S BRIDE

"Mother, I want to introduce you to my husband," was the way Mrs. James Morris was greeted by her daughter Marguerite, who was married New Year's Day to Lawrence Pierson, a wealthy dry goods dealer of Philadelphia, who is associated in business with his father.

The bride has been a waitress for several years and been employed at Atlantic City. It was while the clubman and merchant of Philadelphia was attending a dinner of his clubmates that he became acquainted with the young lady waiting on him, who to-day is his wife.

The couple were married by the pastor of St. Nicholas Church, Atlantic City, on New Year's Day and since that time have been making their home in Philadelphia, after a honeymoon in the automobile of the groom.

The bride was desirous that her parents should meet her husband and the trip was made from the home of the couple to the Shoe City on the North Shore, and after a visit they will return to their mansion home in Philadelphia.

BOMB SHAKES HULL HOUSE

CHICAGO, April 13.—Hundreds of houses were shaken about midnight when a nitro-glycerine bomb was set off, supposedly by Black Hand agents, on the porch of a house at No. 853 Ewing street. One of the central points of panic was Hull House, only a few hundred feet distant from the explosion.

The explosion was so loud that it was heard for a radius of two miles, while hundreds of windows were broken. One of the features of the explosion was the simultaneous ringing in of a false alarm of fire for a box a mile away from the scene. The police believe that the bomb-thrower had an accomplice who turned in this alarm in order to divide the attention of the police and fire departments from the place where the bomb-thrower fired the explosive.

No one was killed in the house, which was badly damaged, but several persons within were thrown from their beds and injured. That Black Hand activities furnished a motive for the explosion was the police deduction when they learned that Augustino Auriga, who lived in the house until a week ago, had received threatening letters demanding that he leave $600 in a vacant lot.

CITY'S BUDGET BILL MAY BE HELD UP

There is a possibility that Boston's annual appropriation bill for the fiscal year of 1910-11, amounting to more than $19,000,000, covering the appropriations for the running expenses of the various city departments, may have to be sent back to the City Council by the Mayor. At the last moment the council restored the $1,000 which it cut from the art department appropriation and inserted in the bill an item providing $5,000 for the construction of a foot bridge over Fort Point channel at Dover street. Under the law the Mayor alone can initiate an appropriation. The Mayor says that he did not recommend the passage of the item in question.

FIRE ESCAPE WORK IS BEING RUSHED

All of the cases against owners and lessees of buildings to compel them to provide fire escapes and other means of egress which were begun by the law department, were either dropped in court to-day or continued, because satisfactory progress was made under the work. Carl Adams, counsel for the city, made this report to Judge Hitchcock, with the result that actions against buildings at No. 52 Oxford street, No. 53 Albany street and No. 17 Charter street were dropped. All the other cases were continued in order to give the owners time in which to complete work already started.

STARK GETS TWO YEARS.

Charles Stark, said to have several aliases, and who says he lives in New York, was to-day sentenced to two years in the House of Correction by Judge McLaughlin in the Norfolk Superior Court on a charge of breaking and entering the house of Alex R. Reilly of Highland street, Hyde Park, on December 17 last.

$2.50 (Lambert-Snyder) Vibrator 98c
WHEN you hurt yourself you rub the spot. When your head aches you rub your temples. Why? Because vibration is Nature's own remedy, and rubbing is Nature's crude way of creating vibration and exciting the blood to acting. Disease is only another name for congestion. Where there is disease or pain there you will find the blood congested or stagnant. There can be no pain or disease where the red blood flows in a rich and steady stream. Good circulation means good health. Congested circulation means disease and pain.
The Lambert-Snyder Vibrator is a light, compact instrument can be operated by yourself with one hand by moving the steel head over the rigid steel rod, and be placed in contact with any part of the body.
It is Nature's own remedy developed and concentrated; with one minute's use it sends the red blood rushing into the congested parts, relieving all disease and pain. If you have any of these ailments you need the Lambert-Snyder Vibrator: Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout, Sciatica, Head Noises, Stomach Trouble, Indigestion, Constipation, etc.

CHASING GERMS FROM ICE CREAM

Proprietors of ice cream factories that have come under the unfavorable notice of the Board of Health were planning to-day changes that have been ordered before the Summer season. Following a tour of inspection of these places the board issued notice that business would be shut down in several places where conditions were found to be below sanitary requirements.

The board's inspectors started yesterday making a tour of the sweatshops.

BROCKTON, April 13.—Nellie Murphy, aged forty-five, was rescued at a fire to-day in the two and one-half-story wooden dwelling house at No. 29 Court avenue. Hoseman George Hall carried the woman to a window and took her down a ladder. The damage to the house was $200.

BALLOON PARTY HAS CLOSE CALL

NORTH ADAMS, April 13.—A narrow escape from instant death was experienced by several prominent Boston and New York men, when making their getaway from Cleveland at this place to-day, the basket of the big balloon which they were in struck the top of the smoke-stack at the Kelly shoe shop shortly after leaving the ground. A wreck in mid air was averted only by the presence of mind of Leo Stevens, who pulled the rip cord, when he threw over two bags of ballast. In addition to Stevens, the party contained Dr. Herbert Bruce of New York, Norman Prince of New York, William Hilliard of the same city, and Harry Brown of Boston. When the Cleveland came to earth it fell in the air near Stanford, Vermont, and landed safely.

RARE MALADY KILLS PRINCETON athlete

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—After three years' illness from a disease so rare that it is said to have been the nineteenth case in the history of medicine, James M. Riordan, Jr., widely known socially, and once a guard on the Princeton football team, is dead at his home at Villa Nova. The disease is known to physicians as blastomycosis, and is caused by a vegetable growth which attacches itself to the intestines. Mr. Riordan was attacked while on a visit South. He was three years old and was graduated from Princeton in 1897.

MANY PASTORS FOR O'MEARA

Headed by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren avenue Baptist church, a delegation of clergymen call this afternoon on Governor Foss to protest in respect to Stephen O'Meara police commissioner of Boston on June 5, when his case expires.

This is the second delegation of clergymen to call on the Governor about the police commissionership. The other delegation presented a petition to the Governor urging that he should not reappoint Mr. O'Meara. There is a clause in the law which says that no police commissioner can hold office more than five years. The petition sent to the Governor from the churches of the city was signed by more than 20,000 persons.

The delegation today calling upon the Governor consists of the following ministers: The Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist church; the Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, Second Congregational church, and the Rev. Dr. Hugh Black of Union Theological Seminary.

The personnel of the delegation had to be kept secret, as the Rev. Dr. Cardinal Myers, archbishop of Boston, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel of the Park Street church and Bishop McDowell were to join that delegation and not let any one know of it. Bishop McDowell disappointed and not able to be present.

It learned that the ministers' meeting held at the Ford building last Monday night, for Myers announced that a petition would be circulated among the congregations of the churches of the city, was taken to the authorities here.

The petition, it is said, will be circulated among every parish and it was not known last night whether a committee would be appointed to present it to the governor.

Rev. Dr. Stockdale, Unitarian clergyman, said: "A policy came to me and I acted upon it. I do not know what others were going to do. I believe Rev. Dr. Donald Tressler Stuart, Church Methodist, really is opposed to everything. We feel that the question is not one of the fitness of Mr. O'Meara, but one of the fitness of the appointment of a Police Commissioner, and I promised him that I would go before Governor Foss with him. He authorized me to use his name and to state my opinions."

Rev. High Macfarlan of the First Unitarian church, said he had a policy to follow. "We feel that Commissioner O'Meara has administered the law fairly and impartially in his department. I personally have nothing against his administration and I am second to no one that during the time he has tried to do his duty and less done about the very best he knew how. That is all that can be asked of any one, and with Rev. Mr. Johnson I urge his reappointment."

Rev. Abijah A. Hebe of the Shawmut Congregational Church is going to the State House simply to discuss the case. "I am not going to the State House to urge Commissioner O'Meara's reappointment," he said. "Nothing of the sort. I am simply going up to talk over the matter. That is all I care to say at present, but I shall give a statement as to my attitude to the State House men later."

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the quality newspaper.

Thayer, Pres., has applied for a Club license to dispense intoxicating liquors to its members at No. 152 Commonwealth avenue, unnumbered entrance on Dartmouth street and unnumbered entrance from alley in rear, in said Boston, in whole of said building.

EZRA H. BAKER, Chairman.

Facsimile publication of Chilton Club's request for liquor license.

When the officers of the Chilton Club, the most exclusive women's social organization in Boston or New England, put in their application for a liquor license for the organization, one and to sign one of the regular application blanks provided by the Licensing Board.

Names of several of Boston's socially elect are thus to be tied away in the archives of the board together with those of just plain, ordinary saloon-keepers. But the officials of the Chilton Club don't care. They are willing to comply with all the dry and crusty formalities of the law so long as they get the license without which the wet members of the organization find it hard to feel the intention of the club is not complete.

Mrs. Pauline Ridgely Thayer is president of the club. Mrs. George Tyson and Mrs. Robert Lovett are vice presidents. Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson secretary, and Mrs. Stanley McCormick is treasurer. The membership is strictly limited to 400.

The clubhouse is said to be the best equipped of any similar organization in the world. Men are not permitted, even as honorary members, but their wives and friends are permitted to bring them there. In fact, one of the arguments for the liquor license policy at the club is that the ladies desire to provide the men guests with wine or other drinkables to make them feel thoroughly at home. The club is exclusively for women.

"Our policy is temperance, if not total abstinence," says Mrs. Wirt Dexter, one of the founders of the club, which has a handsome house at No. 152 Commonwealth avenue. "None of us women intend to get intoxicated, and we shall not keep much liquor in the club. Anyway, society people never abuse liquor the way those not in society do."

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer is president of the club. Mrs. George Tyson and Mrs. Robert Lovett are vice presidents. Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson secretary, and Mrs. Stanley McCormick is treasurer. The membership is strictly limited to 400.

WOMAN SLAYER HUNT IN WOODS

The police of Quincy and armed civilians began a search in the woods about the city today for Alzar Haddad, who yesterday shot and killed Mrs. Lina Peres in the street at Quincy, determined to get him alive or dead.

Nothing has so aroused the people of Quincy since the murdered murders of Louis Restelli, who was afterwards found drowned in a deep quarry pool. It is not believed that Haddad killed himself.

Chief of Police Fitzgerald of Weymouth and several patrolmen of that place, assisted by patrolmen from Quincy, began to drag the Weymouth quarry, in East Braintree, this afternoon, thinking that possibly Haddad might have leaped into the water. It is thought now that he had several hundred dollars in his possession shortly before the crime and that they think he is still at large.

Two clews came to the police today. One was the finding of clothing that had been abandoned under the Fore River bridge between Quincy and Weymouth. Harry Pray, rowing on the river, found the clothing, which consisted of underclothing, blue trousers and a gray overcoat. Policeman Jerry Hoben took the garments to the police station. It was thought that this clothing may have been the property of the fugitive.

A gardener on the Wales estate, in East Braintree, says that he believes he may have been Haddad late yesterday afternoon in the woods near where he is employed. The man was running and occasionally looking back, as though to see if he were pursued.

Chief of Police Burrill sent a description of the man to all of the surrounding towns today.

Haddad is 28 years, 5 feet 8 inches, 160 pounds, medium complexion, brown eyes, dark brown hair, small light brown mustache, pimply face, dark-blue suit, dark gray cap, black lace shoes with wide toes, white negligee shirt with soft collar, upon the left hand of which is tattooed a small cross in blue. He has been in the United States several years and speaks very good English.

HARVARD SEES ITS FIRE PERIL

The Harvard Corporation has apparently at last realized it is not giving protection from fire to students who live in college dormitories, and at the last meeting of the body adopted several recommendations made by the Inspector of Grounds and Buildings at Harvard, W. S. Burke.

It has long been a subject of comment at Harvard that no iron fire escapes are provided on any of the buildings, the old-fashioned rope affairs being the only means of exit.

The recommendations made to the corporation and passed by it are as follows:

1. Close permanently all transoms over doors from suites to halls. Where halls are lighted from suites, wired glass may be used, but other cases use wired glass or other material giving at least as good protection as the door.

2. Where basement doors are commonly hooked open, provide fusible link fastenings and springs on doors so that in case of fire in the basement, the doors will close and latch automatically.

3. Provide gongs in all dormitory entries, wherever a fire might shut off access to the stairs; these gongs to be arranged to operate automatically through a fusible link, and also by mechanical means from various places in the entries. These operating pieces to be suitably protected. Arrangements have been tested at regular intervals.

The first two recommendations will be carried out immediately, but it will take at least two months to fulfill the third, as it does not seem that the apparatus is on the market at present.

MOTORMAN GETS $5,000 L VERDICT

A verdict for $5,000 has been returned by a jury in the first session, Suffolk Superior Civil Court, for Matthew Cortelez, for injuries received as the result of a collision in the East Boston Tunnel caused by a defective air brake. Cortelez was a motorman for the L at the time of the accident.

HUNDREDS COME ON TWO LINERS

Two big passenger liners, the Cunarder Ivernia and the Allan liner Hesperian, docked early today. The Ivernian carried forty-one saloon passengers, 423 second cabin, and 1,237 steerage. There was an unusually large percentage of English-speaking passengers, this class outnumbering any other class in the steerage, and including nine-tenths of those in the second cabin. The second cabin was so crowded that some staterooms usually filled by saloon passengers were used. Among the saloon passengers were Henry Brooks, a finch fly clubman, and John M. Woods, ex-Mayor of Somerville.

The Hesperian landed five saloon, sixty second cabin and ninety-eight steerage passengers, having dropped 1,432 passengers of all classes at Halifax. This ship is one of those owned by the Allan Line. It is almost new and is splendidly appointed.

EASY TO ACQUIRE YOUTHFUL COMPLEXION

"It is so easy to acquire a smooth, rosy, youthful complexion that no woman need despair," writes Mrs. Mae Martyn, beauty expert, in the San Francisco Bulletin. "But in doing so, one must not use face powder, as it enters the pores—enlarges them, causing dull, sallow, rough complexions and eventually wrinkles.

"Much better than any face powder is an inexpensive lotion made by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This lotion is a wonderful skin beautifier, and when applied to a muddy, lifeless, sallow complexion will soften and whiten the skin, and remove that shiny, rough or aged look.

"This lotion does not rub off easily like powder, and it lends to the skin a charming tone of youthful freshness without giving that 'painted,' powdered look."

THE CREDIT CLOTHING BUSINESS OF BOSTON REVOLUTIONIZED

A Man or Woman Can Now Get Credit at the Big Department or Specialty Stores at Cash Bargain Prices and Pay One Dollar a Week.

N. SALLINGER,

Proprietor of the Peoples Credit Co., Who Revolutionized the Credit Business—Mr. Sallinger Is the Originator of the Now Well-Known Peoples Credit Co.'s "Order Check," Taken as Cash in the Big Stores of Boston.

Mr. Sallinger Tells About His Wonderful Credit Idea and How He Came to Work It Out.

How the Old Style Credit Houses Overcharge

They say I revolutionized the "Credit" Clothing Business of Boston. Well, I guess I am a guilty revolutionist all right, and if the old-time Clothing and Jewelry Credit Houses could pronounce my sentence you would never hear from N. Sallinger again. However, "Be That as It May," as our old friend, George Munroe, would say—I am going to tell you something about the clothing on credit and credit jewelry business. Quite a few years ago I was in a position to study the credit business very closely and I found that the public, that part of the public that purchased clothing on credit, was being unmercifully roasted on everything purchased—roasted on price and in quality.

I found that a woman who needed a suit and through force of circumstances was obliged to go to a credit house for it, was charged from 200% to 300% profit on it—for instance, the suit for which the credit house paid $8 was charged to the woman at $20 to $25 a suit—if she needed a coat she had to pay at the same rate and simply because she had to buy on credit. Everything she bought she paid for at exorbitant prices, and the quality was always inferior and the style often years behind the times. When a man bought a suit or coat on credit the credit house charged him at the same rate, a suit that never cost the credit house over $10 was charged to the customer at $20 to $30, the same with the coat; there was no law to prevent it, not even a moral law, it seemed. A worse condition existed in the credit jewelry line. I have seen men and women pay on credit $25 for filled-case watches that never cost the credit house over $6.

New Thought On the Credit Business

The more I studied the credit business the more the rank injustice of the thing impressed itself upon me. So much so that it started me thinking. Now I don't want to pose as a reformer, or an "uplift," or a moralist, I am just a plain every-day business man, who stood out squarely against the then existing conditions, with the best thought and highest ideals for reform and progress in the credit business. As I said, the injustice of the whole credit system started me thinking, and I figured out that the man who would give the people who needed credit a decent run for their money would win out in the end. So I started in the credit business. I really gave the people a run for their money; but it was slow work building up a trade. The older credit houses had the attention of the public. They had big stores and they had lots of money, and I found it extremely difficult at that time to make the public appreciate my honest effort.

Trip Around the World to Study Universal Credit Conditions.

I had the good fortune to take a trip around the world and took every advantage to study the various credit systems prevailing in foreign countries. Surprising to say that in every large city—London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, Vladivostok, Yokohama, Tokio, Fekin, Honolulu and every principal city in the United States—I found that the antiquated credit system was in vogue. A person desiring credit was at the mercy of the old methods—small stock from which to select, cheap goods and exorbitant prices, characteristic of the peculiar style still practiced by most credit houses in New England. The fundamental principle governing all of them was the antiquated idea, "Give little and charge much." So you see I had nothing good to learn from the old methods, only the absolute necessity of improving them.

Birth of an Advanced Credit Idea

One day as I sat ALONE in my office I thought what a great thing it would be if the people who needed credit could walk into any of the Big Department Stores and get it; get credit on anything they needed, and not be charged one single cent more than they would have to pay if they had the cash. The idea took possession of me—the more I thought of it, the more I thought that the thing could be done.

The Millionaire Buys Clothing on Credit—Why Not All of Us?

I reasoned it out this way—say for instance: Mr. M., the millionaire, had an account at a Big Store. All he had to pay for what he bought was the regular cash price. He, like thousands of other well-to-do people, had his purchases charged, and paid for them when he got good and ready, and the Big Stores were glad to put his name and the names of thousands of others like him on their credit books. Now the people who really needed credit and who, when they went to the Credit Clothing Houses, were charged unmercifully high prices for it, could not get credit at the big stores. Why? Simply because they have no financial standing or rating, as it is called in the business world. The rich and well-to-do people have a financial standing that insures the payment of their accounts to the Big Stores. So you see credit is really a matter of insurance—and if you have someone of high financial standing to insure your account to the Big Store that it would be as easy for you to get credit there as it would be for any of the big store's customers.

Big Department Stores become interested in my Credit Idea.

With the credit idea as outlined to you here, I started out to revolutionize the credit business of Boston. I interested financiers. I interested the heads of the Big Department and specialty stores. I showed them where the credit houses were taking thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of business away from the big department stores, and overcharging the people year after year. The department store people saw a great light. They would willingly give credit to anyone whose account was properly insured or endorsed. Very well. I had my account properly insured. They would now give me—N. Sallinger—all the credit I wanted. I had the backing at that time of some of the biggest financiers in Boston, men who believed in me, and who believed in my idea; men who knew that I was doing a great and good thing for the people. These are the men who in a red my account at the big stores. They made my signature—N. Sallinger—good for anything it called for.

The Birth of the Order Check for the People's Credit.

And now, my friends, came the birth of the Order Check—The Peoples Credit Co.'s Order Check. It carries the signature of N. Sallinger, and is used by thousands of people just the same as cash at the Big Department and other stores in Boston. You go into any store you like, buy what you like, use my order check at that store and pay me when you like. How do you like that?

You see, the recognition of my Order Check, the Peoples Credit Co.'s Order Check—by the Big Department stores makes me their accredited representative, or in other words, the Credit Agent for the Big Stores. By the simple arrangement of the Peoples Credit Co. Order Check the Big Stores are not put to the trouble of opening up a lot of accounts. The Peoples Credit Co. gives you all the credit you want; you can pay your bill a dollar a week if you like, and get anything you want at cash bargain prices at the Big Stores.

How a Woman uses the Order Check to Buy Big Store Bargains on Credit.

For Instance—Supposing a woman wants a suit, coat, skirt, hat or anything. She reads the Big Bargain Sale Ads of the Big Department or other stores, and she sees that Soand-So, a big, reputable house, is advertising a special sale of Spring suits for Easter, for business reasons they are selling a $35 suit or cost for $17.75 cash.

The woman wants to take advantage of this excellent bargain, but she hasn't the cash. All she has to do is to come to the Peoples Credit Co. We give her an order check for the $17.75, and she uses it at the store the same as cash, get what she wants, at just the same price as her neighbor, who has cash, would have to pay for it, and then she pays us a dollar a week. Isn't this better than going to the ordinary credit house, paying an exorbitant price for inferior goods?

Think it over.

Another Instance — Supposing a man wants a suit or an overcoat. He needs credit and doesn't care to patronize the ordinary credit house, where he knows that he will be outrageously overcharged for a shoddy garment of probably last year's style.

Now what does the Peoples Credit Co. do for the man who needs credit?

In the first place the Peoples Credit Co. has no special brand of clothing to sell, nothing that it cares to force upon a man. We can buy through the Peoples Credit Co. the well-known standard brands of clothing—clothing of recognized merit and standardized price—clothing that has been widely advertised by reputable makers in the magazines and newspapers—clothing that up-to-date men know is O. K., the makers are well known, the quality is well known and the price it to you is well known. We charge just the same price that is charged by Big Clothing and Big Department Stores. Your neighbor who has the cash can't buy these brands of clothing for one nickel less for cash than you can on credit. This is the squarest, fairest and best deal ever given by any credit concern in the world.

Men can now buy the Standard Brands of Clothing on Credit for $1.00 a week.

Men can now buy on credit the following standard brands of clothing: Strouse & Bros.' "High-Art" clothes, Baltimore, the best in America; "Fashion Clothes," Rochester, most fashionable clothes for young men; "Frankel System" clothes, New York, best medium priced, including the famous "Frankel Fifteen" dollar suit; "Character Clothes," New York, strictly union made, and several others. Also we sell on credit a line of clothing that the manufacturers will not allow us to name, simply because several of the swell clothes shops on Washington street and Boylston street handle it and the makers don't want it mentioned in connection with credit arrangements. But we have it, and it's good—very good, and we will sell it on credit at cash prices. So, you see, gentlemen, if you want the best there is and need credit, we can give it to you.

The Credit Jewelry Business put on a high plane.

In selling jewelry on credit we stick as closely as possible to standard, well-known articles—values that people know are true, we have no brand of our own to foist upon the public. We offer on credit the best—Waltham, Elgin, Howard, Illinois & Hamilton Watches and others of known quality. All our silver is marked sterling, and all our diamonds and other jewels are appraised by an expert before offering to the public.

The philosophy of my story is this: It is no longer necessary for a man or woman who wishes credit to trade at the ordinary credit houses and pay their big, unfair prices for inferior goods, when the best may be had at the best stores by the use of Peoples Credit Co.'s Order Check.

BANK ROBBERS ESCAPE IN AUTO

WINCHESTER, N. H., April 13.—Eight burglars broke into the Winchester National Bank early today, blew the outer door of the bank vault and were frightened away before they had time to blow open the inner door behind which was $20,000. The burglars fled in the direction of Keene. It is believed they used an automobile in making their escape.

The police of all the surrounding cities and towns have been notified, and officers are watching at all crossroads and turnpikes in the hope of catching the thieves before they get out of the State.

The burglary was one of the most daring ever attempted in the State of New Hampshire and came within an ace of being successful.

The noise made by the explosion awakened half the inhabitants of the town. A posse of citizens headed by Deputy Sheriff Webster L. Rixford followed the robbers for several miles into the country. The bank wreckers had too big a load, however.

The burglars used nitro-glycerine. The heavy steel outer door of the vault was blown from hinges and the interior of the bank was wrecked by the explosion. Desks and chairs were smashed and the debris littered the floor. Every window in the bank was shattered.

Sledges, knives, fuses, burlap bags, and other articles and implements used by safe crackers were found near the wrecked vault.

BIG SHOE STRIKE IN LYNN AVERTED

By the request of President Smith and Treasurer Walton of the A. G. Walton Shoe Company of Chelsea, that a special meeting of the stitchers who have been out on strike since March 31 be held to-night to hear the firm's side of the trouble, which began when new working rules were introduced into the stitching room and fifteen operatives discharged, a general strike at this factory was averted today. If the strike is called it will throw 1,400 additional operatives out of work.

FOUND DEAD IN BED FROM ASPHYXIATION

Hyman Lerner, fifty-four years old, was found dead in bed in his room at the lodging house, No. 2 Chambers court, West End, early today. D. Isenburg, another lodger in the house, discovered the body. He smelled gas in passing Lerner's room. He was unable to break down the door, so entered through the window. The gas jet was partly opened. Lerner leaves a wife and eight children. Six of them with their mother are in Russia. Two daughters are married. One lives here and the other in New York.

WEALTHY CHICAGOAN BELIEVED MURDERED

CHICAGO, April 13.—A man believed to be Martin J. Breed, wealthy head of the big wholesale liquor company of Breed & Kennedy, was found dead in the doorway of a north side apartment house early today. The police believe he was murdered.

THESE ARE HARD DAYS FOR THE SCHOOL JANITORS

School Janitor—Say, Bill, where are you going with that broom?

Assistant Janitor—Going to throw it away. It's worn out.

Head Janitor—Warn't nothing. Why, we haven't used that broom only eighteen years. There's four straws left to it. There's two years' sweeping left in it. Hang it up.

That's a sample dialogue between Boston school janitors any day, judging from the opinions on school economy given in the report of the Finance Commission.

The Finance Commission says that economy is enforced to such a fine point, through lack of appreciation, that it is overdone, if anything. The purchasing agent has to be excessively economical. Says the Finance Commission:

"The necessity for economy in the purchase of supplies and implements has been so great at times as to cause the furnishing of a poor quality of paper to the pupils in the schools and to make the janitors use brooms and brushes after they had become practically useless."

The Finance Commission also finds that text books are being used till they are being worn to a frazzle. If Jhamie Jones wishes to spend Affria he isn't able to go all the way around because the Northern exposure of the Dark Continent has been lost in the shuffle of years. Jhamie has to guess at part of it. On this point the report says:

"The commission believes that enforced economy has in some instances prolonged the use of textbooks to an extent that endangered, if it did not actually impair, the efficiency of the instruction."

Persons are wondering, since reading the Finance Commission's report, if all the school geographies now in use show that the Philippines belong to the U. S. now, and not to Spain.

TROLLEY FINANCIERS EXPLAIN THEIR PLAN

John H. Bickford, engineer for the proposed Boston & Eastern Electric Railway Company, Charles S. Baxter, counsel for the road, and representatives of MacArthur Brothers, the New York-Chicago bankers who have agreed to finance the road, appeared before the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs and railroads sitting jointly today, and told of the methods by which it is proposed to finance the road. The hearing was private.

ELECTION EXPENSE BILL IS DEFEATED

The House of Representatives, by a voice vote, today defeated an order offered by Representative Russell Wood of Cambridge, indorsing the McCall bill, now before Congress, for the prohibition of undue election day or campaign expenses. The order was opposed by Representative Underhill of Somerville, Hobbs of Worcester and Doyle of New Bedford, on the ground that the State should not interfere with national legislation.

DO SOAP SHAMPOOS MAKE WOMEN BALD?

"The increasing baldness of women is coming to be a matter of extreme interest everywhere," writes Mae Martyn, famed beauty specialist, in the Seattle Star. "Dermatologists recognize the fact that most women are troubled with short, scanty, dull, brittle, splitting hair and dandruff—sure signs of neglect in caring for the hair.

"These conditions are often the result of washing the hair with soap. The alkali in most soaps is too strong for the hair and causes it to become brittle, coarse, streaky, faded and scant.

"The safest, reliable shampoo is an inexpensive one made from a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but rinses perfectly and dries quickly. It makes the hair soft, glossy and fluffy, and those who use it regularly are never bothered with dandruff, falling hair or other scalp troubles."

DENTIST'S CHAIR PAINS JANITOR

"Help! Legge—Ouch!—Help-p-p-p!"

These cheerful words from the dental office of Dr. Thomas J. Springall in the Odd Fellows' block, Malden, attracted no unusual attention. Passers-by glanced up and said, "Oh, yes—dentist's office—must be having a nerve extracted—Huh!—funny what a howl some people make."

But Thomas Trahue, janitor of the building, was not having dentistry work done. He had been dusting Dr. Springall's office as usual. In dusting the operating chair he accidentally touched a spring which operates the hydraulic machinery of the chair. The back of the chair suddenly slumped down on his head. That was at 10 a. m.

Trahue tried to pry himself loose, but the chair gripped him fast. At times Trahue raised his voice as above. But nobody came till 6 a. m. today. Then Patrolman John Aylward thought the cries from the dental room sounded different from the usual staccato shrieks which are part of the regular dental program.

Aylward managed to work the chair so that Trahue was released. Trahue will sue that chair hereafter with a feather duster.

FARMERS' FREE LIST BILL OF DEMOCRATS A BLOW TO TRUSTS

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Give the Democrats credit. I have witnessed the coming together of two Congresses—and that takes one back to 1861—and never before has either party set itself to work with a more single-hearted purpose of advancing the general, rather than a party, interest than has the Democratic majority of the present House.

It is to the honor of such as Speaker Clark, Chairman Clayton of the Judiciary, and Chairman Underwood of the Ways and Means, that this it so. I have known for twenty years that Mr. Clayton was a big man but I confess that as to Mr. Clark I underrate his powers. I knew he owned courage, honesty, presence, but I failed to credit him with the balance and poise and high genius for strict justice which coupled with a bent to be military, has enabled him to compact the House Democrats into a body and move them all one honest way—the way which points toward public good.

Clark Among First.

Mr. Clark bids fair to rank among the foremost speakers of the House—and that includes such gavel notables as Henry Clay. Already he towers head and shoulders above what but yesterday was common expectation.

Without loss of time or moments thrown away in oral fireworks, Chairman Underwood of the Ways and Means, introduced two bills to-day, each calculated to meet the objects for which the session was called.

They were the Taft bill, arranging for reciprocity with Canada, and the Farmers' bill which from lists in agricultural favor has hundred times demanded which the farmer cannot keep house and till his stubborn acres.

Reciprocity may—and experts say it will—effect a per cent. or two in prices of farm products, and so shrink the stream of income to the right-hand pocket of the farmer. Appreciating this, the Democrats—last night's caucus directed it—has introduced the farmers' bill which will shrink the stream of money coins from the left-hand pocket of the farmer. With the reciprocity and the farmers' bill both on the statute books, while the farmer may not take in so much at his markets, he will not pay so much out at the store. Also the shift will be in his favor, since the Farmers' bill in its free list affects will save him fearful what shrinkage of income he sustains from Canadian reciprocity.

Cummins Will Fight.

There is another thought in this connection. Over at the north end of the Capitol Mr. Cummins, Republican Senator from Iowa, anxious for a presidency and to corral a farm support, was, and is, preparing to fight reciprocity from a first skirmish line in a last ditch and final ditch.

Had there been no bill but a reciprocity bill offered for congressional consideration there might have been some element of selfish and appealing force in Mr. Cummins's position. Doubtfully it would have impressed the farmer with the thought that, whereas the Democrats—and Mr. Taft—were seeking to shorten him up in his profits, Mr. Cummings, and what representations fought round his standards, were doing their combatthed best in his defence.

That farmers' free list bill puts the knife to the throat of every such assumption, with reciprocity and the farmers' bill before him any wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot fail to read therein that, with both the law of the land, the great balance of profit must remain with the farmer. In brief, the introduction of the farmers' bill spikes the Cummins batteries, which else might have hindered against reciprocity with disastrous effect.

Boon to Farmers.

One more thought: Reciprocity will not affect the farmer who lives as far away from the Canadian border as, say, the Ohio River and the South Pennsylvania line. Railroads and railroad rates will go not. As against this, the farmers' free list bill will advantage every agriculturist from Eastport to San Diego, Vancouver to the Florida Key.

The list of articles which are to be free listed opens up the widest gate of tariff relief—wider than any swung back since the smoke blown in the Civil War.

With the farmers' bill a law, folks may get their meat from the Argentines and their flour from Russia; their leather from Spain and their lumber from Norway, with no beef trust or flour trust, leather trust or lumber trust to play the bandit and molest them and make them afraid.

The farmers' bill will never be granted the breath of life as a law, however, until after a fierce long Senate battle is fought and won.

Big Fight Coming.

As much may be truthfully said of reciprocity. Also there will come lobbies—several lobbies. Gold will flow like water about the corridors of legislation.

In gleeful anticipation of the latter auriferous condition, those—they call them active lawyers—who make pulling and hauling upon House and Senate ropes their trade, are already licking their fine in a happy looking forward. They gather as wolves to the quarry, eagles to the feast, Pythian, instead of vultures and eagles, jackals, and ravens would have been the butter simile.

From Ripon, Wis., comes Mr. Fred. Senef. He is a farmer, and like Ford of Windsor, Vide Falstaff and Bardolph in the Merry Wives, he is of substantic good. Likewise, he is gifted of perception and can report a condition, draw an inference. Caught in the flypaper and asked to talk of reciprocity, Mr. Senef said:

"Last year we were paid a contract for butter at the rate of thirty-five cents a pound and eggs at twenty-five cents a dozen for the year round. It was somewhat of a surprise, just to set a wood, therefore, when the price of these important food products in the other day went tumbling to twenty-one cents for creamery butter and twelve cents for eggs. This is the price asked to-day in Wisconsin for butter and eggs; the lowest price I think eggs and butter have reached in a quarter of a century.

Means More Markets.

Mind you, I am in favor of the reciprocity agreement. It will not materially reduce the price of farm products to the farmer, but I think it will open up new markets, and will without lifting the farmer benefit the customer by making the necessaries of life cheaper. There is not any question but, notwithstanding all the opposition, I am convinced it will be adopted.

If reciprocity in prospective can drop butter from thirty-five cents to twenty-one cents, and eggs from twenty-five cents to twelve cents, what will be the result with reciprocity an accomplished fact. Verily, I say that in view of what figures Mr. Senef has been kind enough to furnish, the making of a great relief for the "Ultimate Consumer" is beginning to dawn.

Quick Action Planned.

By word of Mr. Underwood, speaking as chief of the Ways and Means, reciprocity should be before the House for action to-day. The Farmers' bill will follow double quick. Also the bill to provide for the election of Senators by the people. Mr. Bleiker of Colorado is the father—about not be long in making its way to the Senate.

In the bills now being urged the Democrats are laying the last plates for a White House clean sweep in 1912.

A Paper (Money) Doll in the Senate

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

This thing, "Bill" Lorimer, arrived in Washington wrapped up in one hundred thousand dollars of bribe money. How long will he stay in the Senate?

TILDEN READY TO TAKE STAND

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 13.—Edward Tilden, president of the National Packing Company, who was named by Clarence S. Funk, manager of the International Harvester Company, as the man who acted as treasurer for the $150,000 corruption fund used to elect William Lorimer to the United States Senate, was ready to testify when the State Senate investigating committee resumed its hearing of the charges against Lorimer to-day.

Tilden is only one of 125 witnesses summoned during the last week. Another witness, it is understood, will be Edward Hines, the lumber millionaire who is accused by Funk of asking him to contribute $10,000 to the fund on behalf of the Harvester Company. Cyrus McCormick, president of the Harvester Company, also will testify. The Capitol was crowded to-day when the hearing was resumed and the assembly room used for the session was not large enough to hold the spectators by more than half.

It is reliably reported that six Chicago bankers who might know of the check by which $10,000 cash for Lorimer was transacted about the time the $100,000 corruption fund was being collected will testify some time this week.

Edward Hines, who appears the "man higher up" in the investigation, took a defiant stand to-day when he declared that in the face of a demand from a Southern lumberman that he resign his office as president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association he would hold to the place. Hines published his statement to-day denying that he had anything to do with the alleged fund with which Senator Lorimer was elected, and that he ever talked with Clarence Funk about contributing to the fund.

Senator Lorimer is expected in Springfield some time this week.

LABOR PROTESTS BIENNIALS

An emphatic protest against enactment of the biennial election measure before the Legislature, was sent to the members of the House and the Senate by the executive committee of the Boston Central Labor Union.

TAFT IN LIBERAL CHURCH PLAN

"President Taft is a Unitarian, his heart is in this project, and it is his desire that the Unitarians have the best church," members of the Unitarian Club were told by Senator Chandler at their April meeting in the Hotel Vendome. Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard presided and the gathering indorsed the plan to erect in Washington a national Unitarian Church.

The speakers were the Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, Delbert H. Decker of Washington, ex-Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire, George Hutchinson and Ex-Governor John D. Long.

"A national church will extend the teachings of the Unitarian faith in all parts of the world," said Mr. Decker.

"Officeholders and Government employes most of whom move about once in five years, will bring back to their home city or town the teachings of the Washington church, and tourists will carry away with them some idea of Unitarianism, and it that way spread the idea all over the country."

Ex-Senator Chandler urged those present to make Unitarianism what it should be. The character of Edward Everett Hale, he said, had a greater influence in Washington than any Senator.

Ex-Governor Long: "Wherever you go find Unitarian and in Washington a national church will represent the liberal thought of the whole country and not only our church."

TORNADO DEATH LIST IS OVER 20

87. LOUIS, April 13.—Late reports from the tornado-swept district of Kansas say that the death list numbers twenty-four, that at least three towns have been blown off the map and that nearly 100 are suffering from more or less severe injuries. The property damage is over $1,000,000.

The heaviest loss of life was at Big Heart, in the northern part of Oklahoma, on the Midland Valley railroad. Eight are known to be dead and a score injured. But six of the houses that sheltered the 400 population of Big Heart were left standing. The tornado swept everything in its path. Houses were picked up from their foundations and shaken to pieces and the occupants were whirled through the air.

The town of Whiting, Kan., where the tornado first struck, was destroyed. Mrs. David Shoss was swept from the steps of her house into a neighbors yard half a mile away and was picked up dead.

Mr. Ray Carmona was sitting on the porch of her house in Powhattan when the wind lifted the roof of the house from over her and tossed her into the yard. She suffered many cuts and bruises. Another woman and child were reported to have been killed in Pawnuska and many buildings were unroofed and scattered as they were torn from their foundations.

George M. Scott, an Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe engineer, lost his life Kiger when the gale struck. He says fifteen persons were killed. Benjamin Booth, his fireman, was blown through the window of his locomotive cab and across the street.

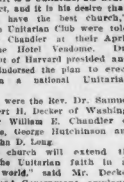
The St. Joseph & Grand Island railroad depot at Maurelle and two box cars were blown away.

Four houses were wrecked and a child was killed, according to dispatches from St. Joseph, Mo.

ABYSSINIAN REGENT, RAS TESSAMA, DEAD

ROME, April 13.—A dispatch received here to-day from Addis Abeben, Abyssinia, reports the death of Ras Tessama, regent of Abyssinia and guardian of the Crown Prince Lidji Jeassesu, a grandson of King Menelik.

Treating The Wrong Disease



Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality they are all only symptoms caused by some weakness or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause, would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots without the use of alcohol and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the distinctly feminine organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

EVERY WOMAN ought to possess Dr. Pierce's great book, the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a magnificent thousand-page illustrated volume. It teaches mothers how to care for their children and themselves. It is the best doctor to have in the house in case of emergency. Over half a million copies were sold at $1.50 each, but one free copy in cloth-covers will be sent on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address the publishers, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

MISS LAWSON TO SHOW HACKNEY

Miss Jean Lawson's hackney, Glorious Vanity Fair, is likely to receive much attention at the Big Horse Show at the Park Riding School the last week of this month if for no other reason than that it is entered in the name of the daughter of Thomas W. Lawson. A few years ago Mr. Lawson had one of the greatest stables of show horses in the country, but recently has not been prominent in the Horse Show.

Glorious Vanity Fair was purchased less than a month ago at the dispersal of the stable of Paul A. Sorg of New York, and the famous equine beauty cost the Boston tan $6,000. She is a registered hackney and was the most sensational animal exhibited in all the shows in 1910. Breaking all show records for her class she made a clean sweep all year, winning fifty-five blue ribbons and a full line of silver in as many times out. By her performance she gained the cognomen of combining all the qualities and characteristics which ever before awarded to one of the class.

Vanity Fair is not a large mare; in fact, she is really a pony of fashionable hackney, for she is only 14¼ hands high, which, of course eliminates her from many other classes in which she would show to individual advantage. She is possessed of substance, bone, quality and finish, as well as exceptional lightness.

Probably the most notable of all her triumphs was at the last National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden, during which she defeated Lady Dillman, the three-time champion, and stamped her as a legitimate prospect for the supposedly honors notwithstanding her size, at the International Show at Olympia, in London she will be seen, she is to ship her across the water next June.

Miss Lawson has entered her new pet in class 31, for horses under 15 2 to be shown to tandem phaeton with female ladies to drive; in the tandem class with her glorious Latter Honour, in Class 32, for ponies in harness, and in class 38, for pony pairs, with Glorious Bonnie Lass.

DR. ELIOT SEES REALTY SHOW

Another large crowd visited the Greater Boston Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition in Horticultural Hall last night. One of the prominent visitors was President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard College. He was particularly pleased with the Ideal Home, the big feature of the show, and was astonished to learn that this complete brick dwelling, fully furnished, had been erected in five days.

The crowds during the second and last week of the exposition have been much larger than those of last week, and the management and exhibitors have been surprised at the interest shown in this great real estate show in New England.

A feature at the exposition yesterday were the ideal home concerts given by a well known piano company. Vocal selections were rendered by Albert C. Orcutt, tenor. Earl William Smith was accompanist. In the upper hall the large crowds were entertained by Edna Frances Simmons' ladies orchestra.

The management of the exposition has extended an invitation through Miller Brothers of the 101 Ranch, now at the Arena, to all the Indians and cowboys and girls in their company to attend the exposition this afternoon, and it has been accepted.

Easter Fashions in Regal Shoes

IF there is any one time in the year when correct style in dress and footwear is essential it is now—the Easter Season.

And if you would have your shoes match the good taste of the rest of your costume—match it with all the careful attention to fine points which the tailor, or the dressmaker, or the hatter, or the milliner gives—your shoes should be Regals.

Sign of "REGAL"

Each of this spring's Regal models is perfectly designed for a certain definite use. Every new feature that your particular taste may call for—in shapes, leathers and colors—will be found in this showing of Regals. Expert Regal designers have taken care of that.

Here are a few of the newest Regal ideas. For smartness, gracefulness, perfect fit and service, they—and the many other Regal fashions, now ready—cannot be excelled at any price.

"BUMP" Men's Black and Russet Calf Oxford $3.35

THIS clever new blucher model is one of the most shapely and graceful four-eyelet ties we ever designed. Note the "high toe." That means both smart style and comfort. This shoe is a great favorite with young men.

AN entirely new creation in pump styles—a chic model that all women will admire. The graceful lines from heel to toe are especially attractive—as is the high heel. No shoe-wardrobe is quite complete without a pair of Savoys.

"SAVOY" Women's Black Calf, Russet and Patent Pump $3.35

"SWELL" Men's Black Calf, Russet and Plaited Bucher Oxford $3.75 & $4.20

THE "Swell" successfully embodies the careful workmanship and fine leathers which have made Regal Shoes famous. This modish style emphasizes the attractiveness of your new Easter costume. It is built on distinctive lines that have made it very popular.

RUSSET Blucher-cut Oxfords for women were never in greater demand than this season. And none is in better taste than the "Newport." It is one of our very smartest styles. The "Newport" is an especially serviceable model for daily wear.

"NEWPORT" Women's Russet, Patent and Black Calf Oxford $3.50 & $3.85

"STUDENT" Men's Black Calf, Russet and Patent Button Boot $4.50 & $5.00

A SMART style and exclusively Regal—a product of Regal's designing skill which combines both shapeliness and comfort. A glance at this cut will show the clever modeling of its high toe and heel.

IF you desire "short-vamp" effects this season, here is the correct model for you. It is our newest representative of New York's fashion ideas, and you will find nothing just like it except in Regal Stores and Agencies. Particularly fetching for street wear.

"BRINKLEY" Women's Russet, Patent and Gun Metal Button $5.00

Regal Prices now run as follows:

$3.35 $3.45 $3.50 $3.75 $3.85 $4.00 $4.20 $4.35 $4.50 $4.85 etc.

RUSTLERS TACKLE BROOKLYN IN THE SECOND GAME

RUSTLERS OUT FOR BROOKLYN SERIES

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Rustlers took good. Not even the most pessimistic can deny this. They are there with ability, speed and the fighting spirit that counts for so much. They work together and for the best interests of the club. If they continue the pace they have set they will surprise every opponent in the league before the season has gone very far.

The Bostonians were asked to face Hugh Bell, Brooklyn's premier right hander this afternoon. But they did not face Bell. He must be much better than Reiger was yesterday, and they knocked after Shotton [illegible] they made him like it.

Yes, the Rustlers looked good. They [illegible] as much [illegible] lovely [illegible] the [illegible] two runs in the [illegible] [illegible] league [illegible] [illegible] the club but only of a good [illegible] and Red [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] strength a [illegible] [illegible] other members could be used [illegible] play at top speed all the time.

No one else saw the Rustler leader perform and believe that he ever fell [illegible] away. He was the ball player in the game and through. He made a peg [illegible] of a low throw ball in the [illegible] ing that sent [illegible] Brooklyn run and [illegible] saved the game for the Rustlers. But even did even a [illegible] [illegible] play was not so important [illegible] [illegible] prove the [illegible] [illegible] his dash first [illegible] the plate in the eighth with the [illegible] [illegible] Nor was his pretty [illegible] [illegible] the Rustlers [illegible] [illegible]

How a Slum Mother Solved a Problem in Sociology

The Piano That Kept a Family Off the Street

By THOMAS TAPPER.

THE two young ladies, who had been chums for four years at a well-known college, sat in the lounge of a commercial hotel one afternoon discussing their life work. They were wealthy, but they did not wish to be idle or useless, and they were seeking an outlet for activity that would better the world and occupy themselves.

On the way to the waiting automobile one said:

"Well, then let us agree to devote ourselves to settlement work. And we begin to-morrow."

So, on the morrow, they rode, by automobile, to what was to them the vague land of the unknown. They scrutinized the streets carefully as they went, and finally stopped. They had reached thoroughfare, which seemed to them to offer all the signs and symbols of a "real slum street."

Now, there are facts about "a real slum street" that do not at once appeal to a wealthy college girl who sets out to do good to the world.

These facts are:

People live in such streets who work and hope, and love one another; these people are often very happy. They are not in living, though all the books on hygiene would seem to prove that they ought to die from the microbes of the neighborhood.

But they do not die.

They drink water from the kitchen tap. They breathe air that is not always free from offensive street odors. Yet one will possess there, no less often than elsewhere, the clear eye, the cheery voice, the hearty hand grasp when friend meets friend; in brief life displays itself as it is jealously guarded for its possessor.

II

Their plan of operation was this: Each should take one side of the street, visit every family, and report.

The report, when the work was done, presented many interesting things none of which seemed easy to change save one. This was Mrs. Ryan's case.

Now, the condition of affairs in Mrs. Ryan's case gave the elder of the girls cause for great alarm. So great was it that she determined to "have it out with her."

The case was this: Mrs. Ryan owed the butcher and others, $ 0, and yet OWNED A PIANO.

Just think of the shameful way the poor spend their money on unnecessary things!

So she had it out with Mrs. Ryan, the auto waiting meanwhile.

Mrs. Ryan was singularly quiet while she listened to the young woman. When it was pointed out to her that the piano would pay all her bills it sold, she was not excited.

Finally the young lady stopped. Its case was in.

"Is that all, Miss Asteria?" asked Mrs. Ryan. "If it is, you listen to me a minute."

She listened quite a few minutes—forty and this is, in substance, what Mrs. Ryan said:

"I have five children, three boys and two girls. They all love entertainment. Across the street live two girls who have been in trouble by being out on the street late at night. Two boys of a family, east of here, have been arrested. I could tell you of lots of other families whose children have been in one scrape or another But none of mine have been in any scrapes Do you know why?

"When I was a girl I learned to play the piano a little. I play for the children and their friends every night. I've scraped together enough to let the two girls learn a little music themselves. The boys learned to sing in school, and I let all five bring their friends here every night and Sundays and have a good time with the piano.

"Sometimes Benny Kolaski brings his fiddle, and you ought to see them dance. They are noisy perhaps, Miss Astoria, but they are noisy IN THE HOUSE. I don't have any bad dreams about my children, or their friends, going to the island.

"Carey, the policeman, never comes here to ask what the boys have been up to. But I've often seen him stand outside beating time with his stick on the railing, while he listened to the music."

Then she looked Miss Astoria in the eye and said very quietly:

"Shall I be selling the piano, do you think?"

No answer.

"Shall I be selling it?" repeated Miss Ryan.

Miss Astoria was seeing light.

"I'll tell you what we will do, Mrs. Ryan. Let me pay the Thirty Dollars."

"No, bless you," said Mrs. Ryan. "The Singing Children

The World-Famous Group by the Sculptor, Luca della Robbia

Luca Della Robbia, whose work is here reproduced, was the head of the celebrated Robbia family of artists who flourished during the time of the Renaissance. They were Florentines. Luca lived from 1399 to 1482. His father was a shoemaker and apprenticed him to a goldsmith. This led to the study of bronze and marble. He became noted as the originator of the famous process of enameling terra cotta figures. The "Singing Children" can be seen in the Museum at Florence. It is part of his greatest work.

The Failures in Life Who Cry for Just "a Chance"

Success Is Measured by Your Effort

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HOW many of us remain that we have not an opportunity to market our talents, when, because of our lack of industry or careful preparation, our work is not worthy of a market!

I am a firm believer in the fact that all our efforts are rewarded with success in proportion to the time and labor we give to them.

Genius without industry will not carry you very far. Work without genius will bring to you a far greater measure of success than genius without work.

Not long ago a young woman came to me with a tearful story of the lack of appreciation with which all of her literary efforts had been met.

"I don't think the editors even read my stories," she said. "They come back so quickly and with only a printed slip. I feel sure that I can write if only I can get a hearing."

She was obsessed with the same fallacy that so many people have—that editors discourage all unknown writers, and that either an established name or some personal influence is necessary to secure editorial attention.

There is no greater fallacy than this.

For every editor welcomes good material from whatever source it may come. And no amount of friendship or personal influence will make him publish an inferior article.

How long could he retain the editorship of any publication if he filled his pages with inefficient material, merely because it happened to have been written by those in whom he had a personal interest?

Was Eager for a "Chance"

However, this particular young woman seemed so eager for what she called "a chance," and so positive that all she wanted was a careful, unprejudiced reading of her manuscripts to secure their acceptance, that I yielded to her request to give one myself to the editor and ask for it a prompt consideration. She left much elated, promising to send the manuscript the next day.

She did. And I wish I could reproduce for you a page of that manuscript. It was unfit to send to any editor. Not only was it atrociously typewritten, with countless mistakes, but it was interlined with pencil, and careless corrections made all over the margins.

And yet she had complained that her work was not given a hearing! To send any one a manuscript like that was nothing short of presumption. And had I been an editor, I would have done what they all undoubtedly did do—return it promptly without reading a line.

Still I was curious to know on what this young woman based her belief that she could write. Surely nothing but the rarest genius could justify this insolent careless manuscript.

But there was not even a glimmer of ability! It was all a stilted artificial effort to be clever. Every sentence was tense and involved. There was plain and scorned simplicity. Her idea of style was to try to semi-ize. She bore no opportunity to express it. Laden with French phrases and her preference to historical and mythological characters.

Such pedantry may be pardonable in a high-school schoolboy, where the youthful orator is eager to display his newly acquired knowledge. But it is inexcusable in any magazine or newspaper work.

Careful Work, Only, Counts

However, the point I wish to make does not concern the merit of her story, but the unfortunate carelessness in the preparation of her manuscript. When I remembered that I recopied my first story nine times so that there would not be a single typographical error or even a scrawl, I could not but be incensed at the utter disregard of her carelessness.

"Have you heard anything from my story?" eagerly.

"No," I answered grimly.

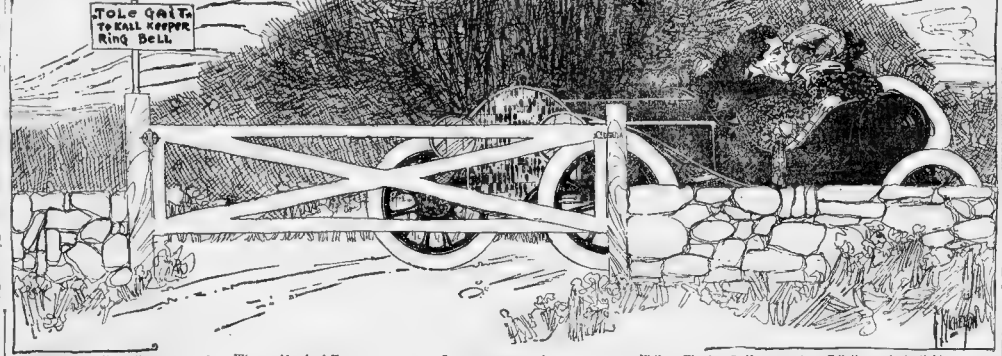
"Oh, then he hasn't decided yet," excitedly, "do you think he will take it?"

"No, I do not"—opening a drawer of my desk, from which I took her manuscript—"your story has not left this drawer. Do you think I would submit such a manuscript to an editor? Do you think I would presume on my friendship and good nature by asking him to wade through such a labyrinth of corrections and inserts? You have spent about two cents on the preparation of that manuscript. Why you have spent two weeks, it may be in a condition to be read."

The word of all this is: Don't complain that you have not a market for your work unless you have given enough time and care and untiring effort to so finish and perfect your work that it is deserving of a market.

And I firmly believe that in the end, honest, conscientious work goes unrewarded.

Cupid Collects Toll from the Wonder Girl



Gliding down the valley,
Skimming o'er the plain,
To the tune of Springtime,
To the birds' refrain;
Seeing life awaken
On the budding trees,
And the wood-flats taken
By anemones;

Who would ask of Heaven
Joy more rich and real?
Springtime on the highway—
Cupid at the wheel!

Oh, the frolic sunshine
On the greening grass,
Oh, to see the wood-folk

Scurry as you pass!
E'en the chugging motor
Takes a tuneful tongue
When, in days of April,
You and Earth are young.
What has Life to offer
Blither than to whirl
Through the open country

With a Wonder Girl?
Let the seething city
Boil its money-pot;
Toils and rolls are over,
Drawing rooms forgot.
Here in Nature's garden
You and she shall roam

Till the misty twilight
Comes to call you home.
Don't forget the law, though,
As you onward roll—
When you see a toll gate,
Cupid, TAKE YOUR TOLL!

To-day's Best Story

THE Duchess de Choiseul-Praslin, formerly Mrs. Hocking Paine of Boston, has had a good deal of trouble over the gallery of bogus "old masters" that she bought from the bogus Count d'Aulby.

"The Duchess, even while in Boston," said an art dealer, "bought a good deal of art rubbish. Her kind heart caused her easily to be taken in.

"There was a young impressionist who sold her a lot of daubs for fifty or sixty times their real worth. This chap was a blond fellow, I believe. He wore a velvet tie her and prided himself on his pictures' unintelligibility.

"At one of his studio teas a lady passed before an enormous canvas that looked more like a pink and gray fog than anything else.

"'It's awfully pretty,' the lady said. 'But er what is it a picture of?'

"The artist studied his production closely. Then he frowned and shook his head. 'By Jove, I can't remember,' he said."

CHAPTER III.—(Continued)

N smoking was permitted, but some of the officers would come to the little open gallery to chew tobacco. No lights whatever were safe amid that bundle of inflammable things.

Bert suddenly fell yawning and shivering. He was overwhelmed by a sense of his own insignificance amid these great rushing monsters of the air. He felt life was too big for him—too much for him altogether.

He said something to Kurt about his head, went up the steps and from the swaying little gallery into the airship again and so, as if it were a refuge, to bed.

A Troubled Sleep

Bert slept for a time, and then his sleep was broken by dreams. Mostly he was falling from formless terrors down an interminable passage in an airship—a passage lined at first with ravenous trapdoors and then with openwork canvas of the most aerious description.

"Caw!" said Bert, turning over after his fourth fall through infinite space that night.

He sat up in the darkness and yawned. The progress of the airship was not nearly so smooth as a balloon. He could feel a regular swaying up, up, up and then down, down, down, and the creaking and tremulous quiver of the engines.

His mind began to team with memories—more memories and more.

Through them, like a struggling swimmer in broken water, came the perplexing question: What am I to do to-morrow?

To-morrow, hurt had told him, the Prince's secretary, the Graf von Winterfeld, would come to him and discuss his flying machine, and then he would see the Prince. He would have to talk it out now that he was Butteridge and sell his invention.

And then if they found him out! He had a vision of infuriated Butteridges. Suppose after all he turned up, pretending it was their misunderstanding. He began to scheme devices for selling the secret and circumventing Butteridge.

What should he ask for the thing? Somehow twenty thousand pounds struck him as about the sum indicated.

He fell into fast dependency that he was in writ in the small hours. He had got too big a job on—too big a job.

A Troubled Sleep

Memories swamped his scheming.

"Where was I this time last night?"

He recapitulated his evenings feverishly and forthfully. Last night he had been up above the clouds in Butteridge's balloon. He thought of the moment when he dropped through them and saw the cold twilight sea come below. He still remembered the disagreeable incident with a nightmare vividness.

And the night before he and Grubb had been looking for cheap lodgings at Littlestone, in Kent. How remote that seemed now! It might be years ago.

For the first time he thought of his fellow Desert Dervish, left with the two red painted bicycles on Dymchurch sands. "I won't make much of a show of it, not without me. Anyhow he did 'ave the treasury—such as it was—in his pocket!"

The night before that was bank holiday night, and they had sat discussing their minstrel enterprise, drawing up a program and rehearsing steps. And the night before was Whitsunday. "Lord!" cried Bert, "what a doing that motor bicycle gave me!"

A Daring Resolve

He recalled the empty flapping of the aeronautical cushion, the feeling of impotence as the flames rose again. From that he confused memories of that single fierce one little figure emerged very vividly and poignantly sweet, Edna, crying out reluctantly from the departing motor car, "See you to-morrow, Bert?"

Other memories of Edna clustered round that impression. They led Bert's mind step by step to an agreeable state that found expression in, "I'll marry 'er if she don't look out."

And then in a flash it followed in his mind that if he sold the Butteridge secret as usual. Suppose, after all, he did get almost pounds. Such sums have been paid! With that he could buy a house and garden, buy new clothes beyond dreaming, own a motor, travel, envy no one, be the civilized life as he knew it, be himself and have. Of course, rose there involved "I'll have old Butteridge on my track, I expect!"

He meditated upon that. He declined again to despondency. As yet he was only at the beginning of the adventure. He still to deliver the goods and draw the cash. And before that——

Just now he was by no means on his way home. He was flying off to Anecdote there. "Not much fighting," he considered, "all our own way." Still, it would do happen to hit the Vaterland on the underside!

"Spose I ought to make my will."

He lay back for some time composing wills—chiefly in favor of Edna. He had settled now it was to be 20,000 pounds. He left a number of minor legacies. The wills became more and more meandering and extravagant.

He woke from the eighth repetition of his nightmare fall through space. "This flying gets on one's nerves," he said.

He could feel the airship diving down, down, then slowly swinging to up, up, up. Throb, throb, throb, throb, quivered the engine.

He got up presently and wrapped himself a coat with Mr. Butteridge's overcoat and all the blankets, for the air was very cold. Then he stepped out of the window to see a gray dawn breaking over clouds, then turned up his light and bolted his door, sat down to the table and produced his chief protector.

He got up presently and wrapped himself a coat with Mr. Butteridge's overcoat and all the blankets, for the air was very cold. Then he stepped out of the window to see a gray dawn breaking over clouds, then turned up his light and bolted his door, sat down to the table and produced his chief protector.

Twenty Thousand Pounds!

He smoothed the crumpled plans with his hand and contemplated them. Then he referred to the other drawings in the portfolio. Twenty thousand pounds if he worked it right! It was worth trying, anyhow.

Presently he opened the drawer in which Kurt had put paper and writing material.

Bert Smallways was by no means a stupid person, and up to a certain limit he had not been badly educated. His board school had taught him to draw up to certain limits, taught him to calculate and understand a specification.

At that point his country had tired of his efforts and handed him over unaided to scramble for a living in an atmosphere of advertisements and tedium. It was a country that was really not his fault.

He was as his state had made him, and the reader must not imagine because he was a little cockney cad that he was absolutely incapable of grasping the idea of the Butteridge flying machine.

But he found it stiff and perplexing. His motor bicycle and Grubb's experiments and the "mechanical drawing" he had done in standard seven all helped him out, and, moreover, the maker of these drawings, whoever he was, had been anxious to make his intentions plain.

Bert copied sketches, he made notes, he made a quite tolerable and intelligent copy of the essential drawings and sketches of the others. Then he fell into a meditation upon them.

Holding the Big Secret

At last he rose, with a sigh, folded up the originals that had formerly been in his chest protector, and put them into the breastpocket of his jacket and then very carefully deposited the copies he had made in the place of the originals.

He had no very clear plan in his mind in doing this, except that he hated the idea of altogether parting with the secret. For a long time he meditated profoundly—nodding. Then he turned out his light and went to bed again and schemed himself to sleep.

The boehgeheen Graf von Winterfeld was also a light sleeper that night, but then he was one of those people who sleep little and play chess problems with their heads to while away the time, and that night he had a particularly difficult problem to solve.

He came in upon Bert while he was still in bed in the glow of the sunlight reflected from the North Sea, below, consuming the rolls and coffee a soldier had brought him, and in the clear early morning light his dingy gray hair and heavy silver rimmed spectacles made him look almost benevolent. He spoke English fluently, but with a strong German flavor.

He was particularly bad with his "th's," and his "th's" softened toward weak "d's."

He called Bert explosively "Pootergge." He began with some indistinct civilities, bowed, took a folding table and chair from behind the door, put the former between himself and Bert, sat down on the latter, coughed dryly and opened his portfolio.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was fourweeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with displacement. I could not be on my feet for more than a few minutes. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief, and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

Alas, poor Rosamond; here she is on a raft in mid-ocean, at the tender mercies of Desperate Desmond and his pal, the Wild Man. The villain controls the whole visible supply of food and water, and he hopes to starve our heroine into consenting to be his wife. But don't you worry, dear reader. She'll never marry that cur.

When one is dying of thirst on the bosom of the briny deep, there is nothing so welcome as a good shower. But Desmond, coward that he is, holds an umbrella over Rosamond so that not one of the precious drops can reach her lips. Isn't he just too mean for anything?

Yes, he is, but it doesn't surprise us a bit.

There's an old saying to the effect that it's an ill wind that blows no one any good. Some of these old sayings are not so bad, considering that they were written ten years and years ago, long before Andy Carnegie made wisdom safe by establishing free libraries in every town, village and hamlet. You've got to hand it to those old guys.

In this case, the same wind which blew Desmond's hat into the water turned Rosamond's umbrella inside out, forming a cornucopia, which rapidly filled up with rain water. When this overflows, the resulting liquid falls into the open countenance of our brave heroine, and she feels much better. All of which makes the villain as sore a a pup.

And here comes Claude in a motor boat. He would have been on the job long ago, but motor boats are scarce in Saranac, and our hero had to hunt a long time before he could find one. Now that he is found, however, he will see that Desmond is held, and his barbaric side partner get what's coming to them. If you don't believe it, read on.

Were we right? We were. Look what Claude did to them. Tied them hand and foot and left them on the raft with plenty of food and water just out of their reach. It's a cruel punishment, we admit, but some too cruel for such unprincipled scoundrels as they. What happens after this will be told in to-morrow's pictures.

Things About Men Women Can't Understand

By DOROTHY DIX

They Preach One Thing and Practice Another

"TO my mind," said the third woman, "the most incomprehensible thing about man is his contradictory attitude toward woman.

"The main reason that there is so much domestic discord is because we women never know what men really want us to be and do; for they preach one doctrine and practice another; and the more we try to live up to their ideal, the farther we fall from it.

"For example, take the matter of dress. There is no subject in which men are so fond of discoursing as upon the folly and the extravagance of women's fashions. They tell us that we ruin our health by high heels, and tight corsets, and bow-necked frocks, and how foolish we are not to wear loose garments that hang from the shoulders and braid flat shoes.

"But would a girl ever have a beau, or catch a husband, who would attire herself in this manner? Never in the world! Observe any afternoon, and you will see that the maiden about whom men are standing six deep has on the most foolish and frivolous clothes that money will buy.

"Furthermore, just let a wife try to dress according to her husband's theories and he will be ashamed to be seen out with her, and demand to know why she makes a fraump of herself. I know, for I have tried it, and that was how it worked out.

Here's Another Paradox

"Another thing I can't understand about men is that the poorer wife a woman is the better her husband seems to love her. It is the selfish, vain, silly, parasitic wife who makes her husband work himself to death to supply her with money, who gets all the cakes and ale of matrimony.

"That kind of a woman appears to be almost adored by her husband and looked up to by him, whereas the wife who is industrious and economical, and tries to do her duty, is seldom appreciated. Oftener than not she gets old and shabby working and saving for her husband, and her reward is for him to run off after some younger and fairer woman.

"A man certainly wants a good woman for a wife, and yet the better wife she is the more apt she is to lose him. Her virtues are her undoing.

"Still another mystery of the masculine temperament is why men marry for a home, and then are frantic to get away from it. Probably the man who is always inventing excuses to stay away from home at nights, or who puts on his hat the minute dinner is over and goes to the club, would say by way of excuse that his wife does not interest him, that she bores him and—

"What's an excuse that should not count; for every wife represents her husband's taste in women.

"She is the one particular lady that he picked out of the whole world for a life companion, and there's nothing stranger than why he should tire of the same qualities in his wife that he found so fascinating and alluring in her when she was a girl.

"Believe me, there are millions of lonely wives who sit up and ask themselves that question, and why their husbands should have married them if they were going to weary of them so soon.

"And not a woman can find an answer to the query. She knows she is just the same woman that she was; and, for the life of her, she can't see why the man who was breaking his neck to get her before marriage is breaking the same record in getting away from her after marriage.

"And a woman can't understand why a man who apparently loves his family and his home so seldom takes any active part in making that home happy or shouting his wife any real affection. Have seen men who were frantic when their wives were ill, and who couldn't get enough doctors and trained nurses to try to save their lives, yet who never gain their wives a compliment, or showed them a particle of tenderness, or gave any indication of appreciation or affection.

Incomprehensible Conduct

"And I know plenty of men who are really devoted to their families who are as cross as sore-headed bears at home; who never give either wife or children a pleasant word, and whose frumfice draw a sigh of relief whenever the lord and master shuts the front door behind him.

"Could anything be more incomprehensible than the conduct of these men, for they work their fingers to the bone supporting their families, and then cut themselves off from all the rewards in love and comradeship that they would get if they adopted a human instead of an ogre attitude towards their wives and children? It is as idiotic as investing your whole capital in Government bonds, and then burning up the coupons. Yet I see sensible men do this every day.

"Another curious thing about men that women can't understand is that men never seem to realize that women are the daughters of men and the sisters of men, and made of the same clay as men, and that they have precisely the same needs and desires and are subject to the same temptations. Men seem to think that women feel differently from the way they do about things, and may be trusted to do differently under certain circumstances. Which is sometimes a mistake.

"A man thinks he may safely neglect his wife, and that she won't find consolation as he would. He would feel degraded to have to ask anybody for money; but he thinks a woman enjoys being a mendicant. He thinks that a woman will get into mischief if she is idle and lonely.

"And the knowledge of a thousand tragedies doesn't teach him anything.

"Queer, isn't it? And the queerest thing of all about man is that he can be faithless to his wife and yet really love her and admire her above all other women in the world.

"That's an emotional triple somersault in the air that the feeble female intellect probably will never be able to grasp.

"But it's so, nevertheless."

Just Like a Book

THIS really happened, over in Germany, last Summer.

A very seedy looking individual approached a prosperous appearing man on the streets of Berlin and said: "Sir, you look like an American. I am one of your countrymen. For the love of heaven, help me to get something to eat!"

The second tourist peered into the other's face, and exclaimed: "Why, Jones, old man, is this you? Why, what could possibly have brought you to this condition?"

"A book called 'How to Tour Europe on $200!'" answered the other. "It was all right as far as it went—but it didn't tell how to get back to America."

The Surest Way To Remove Hairs

(From Health and Beauty Notes.)

A new and simple powder is fast supplanting the electric needle for removing superfluous growths from the face, neck or arms. This powder, known as delatone, is the discovery of a famous Russian scientist, and the case with which it is used and the satisfactory results always following favorably recommend it to persons afflicted with hairy growths.

Get an original package of delatone from a nearby druggist and with some water mix enough into a paste to thickly cover the parts. Let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin well, and the hairs are gone.

You may find delatone a trifle expensive, but its use insures a quick and painless way to remove stray hairs.

"I TOLD him to stand where he was, and if he came near me I'd shoot him. Once he moved, and I nearly did. And I wished I could—and nobody knew it. I don't wonder you hate me. I am horrible. And then I prayed he might die."

"Go on."

"That's all."

"You haven't told me what he wanted—what he said."

"Oh—horrible things. I can't tell you."

"You shall tell me." He caught her wrists and held them.

"Don't," she said; "you frighten me."

"Tell me, then," he repeated, and his grasp of her wrists hurt.

"About our being married—him and me and wanting——"

"Did he want you to go and live with him?"

"I don't know. No. He . . . don't make me tell you," she said.

"Go on." he said inexorably.

"He said if I married you he'd not interfere if I told him."

"Is that all?"

"Yes." Pause. "Nearly all."

"Go on."

"Or that if you didn't care about marrying me we could live together without——"

"Damn," said he.

"Why did you make me tell you?" she said. "Yes, I'll tell you everything. You're hurting me—let go."

"Go on."

She Sprang Up Wildly

She sprang up wildly. And he, as wildly, caught her in his arms.

"Don't I love you? Don't you understand that I can't bear to think of his coming within a yard of you? Don't you know it drives me mad? How would you like me to meet another woman alone at night, in a shrubbery—a woman I was married to?"

"I should know you didn't want to. I should trust you," she said.

"You don't know how I love you," he said; "it's like a fire in my heart to think of him. Oh, I tell you, it's a good thing for him that he's dead."

"Don't," she said faintly, "oh, don't! I have been brave. I can't be brave any more. Forget him. Promise me you'll never talk of him again to me. I shall not go mad if you do. I know I shall. Promise."

"I'll promise anything you like," he cried, and his anger transfused itself into passion. "You're mine, mine, mine! Are you afraid of me now? Are you?"

"No," she breathed, in a caress.

"You ought to be," he said, and let her go. She did not understand him.

He walked to the window and stood looking out on the dark pit at the bottom of which was, she had told him, the garden.

"And he threatened me and said things about actresses and dancers being all horrid about love and things. That was when I wanted to shoot him. Only they'd have found his body and known. Yes—now you hate me. It serves me right for speaking the truth."

"What did you say to him?"

"I told him to do what he chose, and that I wasn't afraid of him. But I was."

"Did he touch you?"

"I should have killed him if he had."

"And then?"

"Then I came home—and then I worked as hard as I could. And prayed. And then he was dead. He's dead now. And yet you would go on like this. And now you don't love me any more—I wish I was dead. I wish I'd never seen you."

"It's Good for Him He's Dead"

"It's a good thing for him he's dead," said Templer astutely. "If I'd been there when he dared speak to you like that, he wouldn't have had much chance of speaking like it again."

"Don't let's think of him any more," she said. "Don't. I can't bear it. Don't look like that. You frighten me. Don't! I can't bear it. I can't bear any more. I've borne so much. You don't really love me. You don't know what I've done and suffered for you—you never will know—"

She followed and laid her head against his arm.

"Ah, don't!" she said. "We've been so miserable! Can't we be happy now that we've got each other?"

"I ought to go," he said dully.

"No," she said, "no. How can I ever let you go again?" She turned her face to his, and her eyes implored.

"There!" he said hastily, and kissed her, answering her appeal.

"It's not all right! You're still angry."

"No—no—I'm not angry. I'm—I'm tired."

"Lie down," she said, "lie down on the sofa, go to sleep. I'll sit and hold your hand. I'm not tired."

"We'll sit down," he said, "and talk of pleasant things."

"Two," said the carriage clock, more in sorrow than in anger.

They took, as before, the opposite ends of the sofa. But in five minutes his arm was round her neck and she was smiling at him with lovely, innocent eyes—alluring, intolerable. He turned her face so that he could not see it.

"Why," she said, restating, "how pale you are—and how bright your eyes are!"

"The better to see you with," he quoted.

"What is it—what is it? Aren't you happy?"

"Happy?" he echoed. "There—let's be quiet and rest."

Her arm went around his neck, and she rested there.

In her, only a faint, not-understood long troubled the joy of that silence—the longing to do everything for him, to be everything to him, to give him everything he wanted, to make him happy.

And so they sat—he thrilled with the deepness of the fight within him, and she clinging, yielding, and yet ignorant. The natural sweet tenderness of her embrace touched presently the spring of tenderness in him; his arm clasped her less closely, more kindly; and when at last she fell asleep in his arms he held her lightly, securely, fondly, cherishing her in her slumber as one holds and cherishes a sleeping child.

Towards morning he, too, slept.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A Woman Next Door

By WINIFRED BLACK

OH, such a poor, forlorn, miserable, strangely written, little letter she writes.

She's very, very young, and very, very foolish, and very, very jealous, and very, very insensible. She has a pretty little house, and, oh, such a nice husband, and her roses are doing beautifully. She lives in California, and she has lots of pretty little dresses, and just the other day her brand new husband bought her just the sweetest hat, and he's awfully nice to her, is the brand new husband; he's always taking her places.

The other day they both went out on the "Seeing Los Angeles" automobile and were gone half a day and had their luncheon downtown in a restaurant, and he didn't seem to think a thing about spending all that money on her—just to make her happy.

But, oh, there's a fly in the paint—in the fresh, new, pretty paint—and such a big, black, buzzy, horrid fly it is, too.

There's a woman next door, not very young, yes, she's pretty enough when she's fixed up, but she's a bold thing, anyhow, and whenever the brand new husband goes out on the porch of his brand new home, zing, the front door of the house next door pops open and out flies the bold thing boldly there, and she stands on her own porch and looks and looks at the brand new husband, and—oh, depth of woe!—the brand new husband looks and looks at the bold thing next door. And when the little wife speaks to him about it he laughs and says he never noticed the other woman at all.

And she knows he's telling stories, because she stood right at her own window behind the curtain and gazed right at him when he was looking at that woman next door just as hard as he could look, and, oh, what shall she do? How can she trust him, how can she believe a word he says? And she cries and he laughs, and the woman next door smiles, and all the neighbors, so the brand new little bride thinks, will soon begin to laugh, too, and that she cannot, will not bear.

Why, you poor little geese, you—yes, geese; your brand new husband is just as bad as you are—you are tormenting your poor little heart about nothing.

You'll both make home today and meet the hooded figure of a real sorrow standing on the little porch of your little cottage, and then you'll wonder how you ever spent so much time and misery over nothing.

Bother the woman next door! I wouldn't know she was alive if I were you, little bride. Or, if I couldn't help knowing it, I'd ask her over and introduce her to my husband, and when he came home to dinner, real good and hungry, I'd be so busy talking with the woman next door that he'd have to wait for his dinner and it would get cold. When he was saying something real sweet to me, I'd interrupt him to tell him something awfully nice the woman next door had said to me about some nice friends of hers she wanted me to meet, and I'd ding-dong her into his ears and dangle her before his eyes until he'd get away from that woman if he had to sell his house and let to do it.

Don't mortgage your heart, poor little goose. It's yours; don't let the woman next door get hold of it in her careless, cruel hands, and tear it to pieces.

Your husband chose you out of all the world. There were plenty of women next door all the time he was coming to see you, and he never knew they were alive any more than he'd know this one was alive if you didn't insist on drawing his attention to her.

Open your door, little bride, throw up the windows, let in the sunshine and the fresh air, sing and laugh and be happy, and let the poor woman next door make some other woman miserable, if she must. She can't touch you or your happiness if you refuse to let her.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PARENTS QUITE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl, twenty years old. I am keeping company with a man forty-seven years old with a large fortune left to him by his father.

My parents object to me going with him because he is too old for me. They think I love him for his money, which is not true. ANXIOUS.

YOUR parents are quite right. He is much too old for you. You would very soon tire of being the constant companion of a man much older than yourself. You would have nothing in common and very little enjoyment.

WHY NOT?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady twenty years of age, and am keeping company with a young man about ten years my senior. Do you think my age is too far apart? He takes me out a good deal and is of a lolly disposition. He has a good position and is steady in his habits. Would you think that we would make a good match? E. B.

THE difference in your ages is not too great, and, judging from your description, I should say that he would make a most excellent husband.

HER PLACE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young man asked a young lady for her permission to call on her. In response she asked him to say her a New Year's call at a friend's house. Since then he has quite anxiously called again, but a New Year's call being very informal, he would like to know this.

Is it the young lady's place to extend to him another invitation to call, or is it his place to ask again? He seems to think it her place, as he says nothing in regard to the matter, although he is quite attentive to her and seems eager to make another call. M. L.

I THINK she should repeat the invitation. She knows he is anxious to call, so she runs no risk of appearing to run after him. She might tell him that she would be glad to see him any time at her own home.

BETTER NOT WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl twenty-three years of age, and am keeping company with a young man about four years ago, whom I love very much, and he told me he loved me.

I have been out to places of amusement with him, and he treated me very nicely indeed. The last I saw of him was on January 3, and he said he would call the next night. I did not see or hear of him since.

Don't you think if he loved me he would call and see me?

Should I wait for him or go out with another young man? I can't love another as I love him. I know he is not dead. E. M. S.

MY dear, I don't think I would wait. Try and interest yourself in some other man. This one may come back, but I don't feel as though he would. Don't fret; there are many happy days yet in store for you.

Foreigners invariably remark on the superior figure and grace of American women as compared with European.

Grace of figure being a matter of corseting we know from the millions annually sold of R & G Corsets that they have so much to do with this impression.

"I take pleasure in recommending the R & G Corset as the most comfortable I have ever worn. The combined style and easy comfort of the R & G should be a delight to every well dressed woman, as its flexibility is a quality particularly sought by dancers."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS STEADY ON N. Y. 'CHANGE

NEW YORK, April 13.—Missouri Pacific and Canadian Pacific were the market leaders on the stock exchange to-day, each according at the opening an advance of a half over last night's close. The strength was held to be due to the prospect of early enactment of a Canadian reciprocity agreement. The greater part of Missouri Pacific's early gain was lost upon the first few sales, stock being thrown upon the market in the strength of the rise.

The market was steady with only trifling changes. Reading was up ¼, while United States Steel was off ⅛ and Southern Pacific off ⅜. Union Pacific and St. Paul opened unchanged. The trade was small and important changes were not looked for during the day.

The curb market was quiet and narrow. Americans were firm in London at a fair cost of active covering by short interests.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

All exchanges in the United States will be closed from this afternoon until Monday morning. London Stock Exchange closes Friday, Saturday and Monday. Friday and Monday are statutory bank holidays, when all exchanges are closed. Saturday is taken at the option of the Stock Exchange. Jewish Passover begins to-day, affecting principal European exchanges. Good Friday is a fairly general European holiday, except in the Greek Church countries, and is observed in all British colonies. Besides being a bank holiday, Monday means the closing of the exchanges in France, Germany, Italy, Holland and most other European countries, except Russia and Greece. The Buenos Ayres market will be closed to-day, Friday and Saturday.

Democratic leaders in Congress are seriously considering the passage of a bill to take the place of the Sherman anti-trust law. This move is said to be due to the apparent impossibility of an agreement by either business men or judges as to the exact meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law. A law that the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States have difficulty in interpreting is no law for the ordinary citizen. The new idea is to frame a law stated in such simple language that it cannot be misunderstood. Business men do not care what the law is, provided they know what it is.

Announcement from Washington of a list of articles to be placed on the free list in the tariff reform bill failed to have any influence on the market. This list furnished an excuse for attacking several standard securities, and the fact that it was not used for that purpose led to a general belief that fundamental conditions are really sound. American Woolen Company stock held firm, as did National Biscuit and all the steel shares. Coal and iron companies will be affected if the free list, as announced, is adopted by law.

$ $ $

While bond dealers say business is quiet, companies which sell first mortgage certificates are doing a record business. One institution which makes a specialty of this class of investment sold six times as many certificates in March as it did in the corresponding month last year, while business for the first half of the current month was greater than that for the whole of April last year. It is probable that this activity of this class of investment when other securities are quiet is due to the easy manner in which purchasing can be made. This appeals to the smallest investor, who desires safety of principal as well as interest.

$ $ $

Prices are at a very respectable level and about the only risk an investor runs in selling now is that he may have to pay a few dollars more should business have an unexpected revival. It is a rash thing for any one to pretend to know what this market is going to do in the next two months, but in the light of developments of the past two or three weeks one is compelled to admit that there has been a change, and that the market seems much more likely to decline than to advance.

$ $ $

The stock market is firm largely because the big people with stocks realize there is no one trying to sell, since large offerings would simply break prices without accomplishing much in the way of distribution. It is a question, therefore, whether it would not be wise for the little people to sell before the big people take a notion to try to get out.

$ $ $

Big crops do not necessarily mean prosperity. Prices for agricultural products are so low that the buying power of the farmers will be much less in the next twelve months than it has been in recent years, even if bumper crops are raised. There seems to be a disposition to break up political and business alliances.

$ $ $

Odd-lot buyers are playing an important part in the market just now. There is considerable selling by these people also, but much stock is actually absorbed and carried away from the Street. All the great railroads and industrial corporations are increasing the number of their stockholders rapidly. The stock thus purchased will be hard to dislodge, because, even should prices decline, the inducement to each individual stockholder is so small it does not worry him, since he has purchased for the dividend and not for trading in the market.

$ $ $

Owing to the heavy demand from banks, merchants and manufacturers, short term notes are now selling at high record prices, with purchasers just as eager to buy as when they were two or three points lower.

The United States Needs a Department of Health

And, to Begin With, There Should Be a Committee of Public Health in the House of Representatives.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner.

It is the duty and it should be the business of the United States to protect the health of human beings in this country.

There already exist government departments that take care of the health of animals. Pigs, sheep, cows, goats, horses, chickens—all of these are watched by a government which in their case is not afraid of "paternalism."

As a result of this watching, a great deal has been done and is done every year to protect the health of animals and birds. Many dangerous diseases have been stamped out entirely or made practically harmless by rigid quarantining and careful inspection.

This work has been worth millions upon millions to the farmers and to the national wealth.

The government should have the intelligence to do—as far as it can properly and legitimately be done—for human beings in this country what the government has long done for animals.

The government should establish a department of public health. The ablest men in the world should give that department their advice.

There should be nothing but contempt for those that fight against this idea—for all of them are ignorant or selfish or dishonest.

There is no idea whatever of compelling any human being against his will to be made healthy if he doesn't want to. But there ought to be rules that would prevent one human being from needlessly risking the health and life of another—either through indifference or because he happens to cherish some asinine idea concerning disease.

As a first step there should be established in the House of Representatives a Committee on Public Health, similar to that which now exists in the United States Senate.

In this country, if a farmer has a young pig that is ill, or an old horse that has trouble with its teeth, he can get from the Agricultural Department, free of charge, the best possible advice about that young pig's illness or the old horse's teeth.

But if a woman has a young child that is ill, all the government can do is to tell her to take care of it herself. And as for old men and women that are ill, having trouble with their teeth or any other kind of trouble, the attitude of the government of the United States toward them is practically expressed in the words, "Why don't you go and die if you are old?"

The government alone has the power to regulate communication between States. It alone has power to regulate the handling of immigrants and the problems which they present.

For the immigrant we have a medical department, of which the principal duty is to keep out those that are declared undesirable—and a very cruel duty it is.

If the government has a right to establish a quarantine at the doors of this country to control and to turn back the unfortunates that come here for a refuge, surely the government has a right elsewhere throughout the country to interest itself in the public health, to take care of those that are ill at least by spreading information, and to take care of those that are well by preventing the spreading of disease.

Something for Harvard to Ponder Over

With true democratic spirit Yale has dealt a body blow at the snobbery of mere wealth. Hereafter the expensive private dormitory will be taboo and the classes will be housed in buildings owned and operated by the university.

Certain dormitories will be reserved for seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen, and thus every man will know every other man in his own class, as in the days when the college was young.

The rush of rich men's sons for the expensive outside dormitories has resulted in dividing the students into two classes, the wealthy and the poor. It has resulted in the average man graduating without knowing thirty-five of his classmates, and has thus furnished ample ground for the fear that snobbery would soon sound the death knell of the far-famed Yale spirit.

The luxurious apartment life indulged in by the rich at Harvard on that favored reserve known as "The Gold Coast" seemed in a fair way to be duplicated at New Haven until the recent action of alumni, faculty and students made it impossible.

The new plan will give every man a chance to stand on his own merits. If he is poor he will not feel isolated; if he is rich he will be faced with qualities which money cannot buy. In either case he is bound to benefit.

The new system also will mark an era in life at a large university. The seniors of next year will occupy, among other dormitories, Connecticut Hall, which 150 years ago contained all there was of Yale.

Yale's great rival, Harvard, may ponder well on this new move. It is cohesion among students that makes a university great and implants friendships which make the name of alma mater one of the treasures of life.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

AN EASY WAY TO RICHES

Editor AMERICAN:

Was a man wishes to become wealthy let him take avantage of our present tax laws like a fellow did in the Southwest. In the early days of Oklahoma City a man from Ohio secured for $30.98 two twenty-five-foot lots on Main street, in the centre of the shopping district. They are now surrounded by skyscrapers. Once a year the Ohio man visits Oklahoma to pay his taxes on the two lots—a nominal sum. Last year he was offered $150,000 in cash for the property, which still remains unsold. He would not sell, because, "the land was growing in value faster than any income he might derive from the rental of buildings." Improvements would be taxed, while taxes on the unimproved land, held out for use, are trifling. The man sits still and lets the enterprise and industry of the community make him rich. This same cobbler prevails in Boston and Mayor Fitzgerald is trying to obtain for the municipality a share of this "unearned" wealth. The taxes may be reduced and Boston may really become the "poor man's city." Help it along!

A LEGAL CRIME

Editor AMERICAN:

I fully believe in punishment for crime, if guided by reason and tempered with mercy, and administered in the spirit of justice and righteousness, but when a cultured, civilized, Christian State deliberately, legally murders a mere boy, as in the case of Ivanhoviski, the Lynn bandit, whose moral sense was so perverted that he really did not know right from wrong, who inherited the most murderous, abnormal tendencies, who was murdered and sold of affection, who was the victim of hell, vicious teachings and environment, who, in a word, was criminally insane, I say that that State commits a crime—a crime that is a blot upon our civilization, a disgrace to humanity, and will be so regarded by posterity. Yours for justice, tempered with reason and mercy.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's Mission to Help Free The Women of China

MRS. ELLA WHEELER WILCOX'S visit to the Orient, where she is traveling to study the condition of women for the AMERICAN, is attracting considerable attention from the press of China and India.

The distinguished authoress has met many prominent in letters, arts and science in the various Asiatic capitals, and has sought their aid in investigating the lot of women in those lands, where ignorance and tradition still bind the weaker sex with chains worse than slavery.

She has made exhaustive notes which will furnish the basis of future articles which she hopes the women readers of this newspaper will digest and employ to further the cause of women's emancipation all over the world.

In Hong Kong she was hailed as an emancipator of the Chinese woman. The following is from the South China Morning Post of Hong Kong, which sent a representative to interview Mrs. Wilcox:

Can't Understand Why China Is Behind in Great Work

Mrs. Wilcox has been deeply impressed with the seclusion in which the better class women are compelled to live, and also by the apparent—all too costless—indifference of the clerical sex for the welfare of those who carry the burden of keeping the race alive.

"What has really beaten my understanding," she said, "is how a nation which is credited with being the inventor of the art of printing, a nation which built the great wall of China and produced the compass, can be so far behind in all that has pertained to modern advancement."

The greatest teacher Mrs. Wilcox has known in her life was Swami Viva Kananda. He taught self reliance, self-development, meditation, complete control of patience and the living of the most altruistic life for others.

By challenging prevailing ideas in China, the missions were doing, according to Mrs. Wilcox, a great work for China. They were helping to develop the minds of the people, enabling them to form new ideas, ideas which were all very much more important to them than the worship of ancestors.

It will be Mrs. Wilcox's special duty when in India to visit some of her women friends there who are working in the cause of the marriage of widows and the abolition of the prevailing curse of child marriage.

The great themes which have moved the poetic spirit of Mrs. Wilcox are peace, passion, power, progress, love, inspiration, cheer and sentiment. Actors, statesmen, politicians, clergy, reformers and the upper ten, including our late King Edward have all delighted in quoting from her writings.

She Began to Write When a Child of Eight Years

The most charmingly and unconventional and sweetest of women, she makes hosts of friends wherever she goes.

Asked what influenced her to take to literature, Mrs. Wilcox told how she was a believer in reincarnation. She began to write at the age of eight.

"I think I must have had the talent in some other body at some other time," said Mrs. Wilcox, "and did not finish my work.

"At the age of fourteen, I began my career in earnest. My mother expected me to be a writer of fiction, and I was allowed to read the most exciting kind of second rate novels. My imagination, naturally vivid, was thrilled by this order of literature and unquestionably it influenced the nature of my early writings.

"I made valiant efforts to become a novelist; I wrote short stories with painful labor, and when indulgent editors accepted them, and gave me pictures and books and articles from their prize lists in payment, I felt I was moving toward my goal.

"But my happiness consisted in writing verse. Great was my happiness therefore when I received an oblong piece of paper, my first check, for three poems.

"My father, who believed in the old penny-saving idea, used to ask me if I was not paying out more for postage than I would ever get back in payments. He became very grave when three months elapsed without any remuneration, but when the mail brought checks amounting to $40 his faith in my methods was established, and he was very proud of me.

"This influenced me, and I also owe much stimulation to three of my teachers, two of whom, Nancy Jones and Olyette Smith, live and write near my old home in Wisconsin today."

Mrs. Wilcox was "very interested" to hear from the interviewer that she had been described by admirers in India as the Kipling of America.

Described as Kipling of America by Her India Admirers

"I never knew," she said, "that I had written anything after his style, unless one of my latest may be considered so," and she presented the interviewer with a poem entitled "The White Man."

The poem is printed herewith.

The White Man

(Mrs. Wilcox's New Poem)

WHEREVER the white man's feet have trod
(Oh, far does the white man stray)
A bold road rifles the virginal sod,
And the forest wakes out of its dream of God,
To yield him the right of way.
For this is the law: By the power of thought
For worse or for better, are miracles wrought.

Wherever the white man's pathway leads
(Far, far, has that pathway gone)
The earth is littered with broken creeds,
And always the dark man's face recedes.
And the white man pushes on.
For this is the law: Be it good or ill,
All things must yield to the stronger will

Wherever the white man's light is shed
(Oh, far has that light been thrown),
Though nature has suffered, and be— fled.
The goal of the race has been thrust ahead.
And the might of the race has grown.
For this is the law: Be it cruel or kind,
The universe sways to the power of mind.

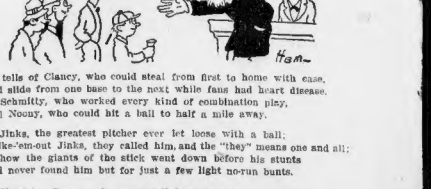
The Old Bewhiskered Fan

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

THE old bewhiskered baseball fan is with us once again.
Once more we hear the thrilling tales of things that happened when Ball players who were simply great made up the big league clubs—
The worst of which could make our champs look like a lot of scrubs.

A quiet loafing place downtown, where hock beer goats disport
Is where he likes to gas and hold his ever transient court;
Or else beside a vacant lot where some hot lunch-time game
Is swatted out by office boys of future baseball fame.

He strokes the patriarchal stuff that, fortunately, hides
From general view his bulging Adam's apple, as it glides
Machine-like up and down his swallow as he ruminates,
And eloquently on the deeds of old-time stars dilates.



He tells of Clancy, who could steal from first to home with ease,
And slide from one base to the next while fans had heart disease.
Of Schmitty, who worked every kind of combination play,
And Noony, who could hit a ball to half a mile away.

Of Jinks, the greatest pitcher ever let loose with a ball;
Strike-'em-out Jinks, they called him, and the "they" means one and all;
Of how the giants of the stick went down before his stunts
And never found him but for just a few light no-run bunts.

Of Shortstop Brown, who never failed to stop the hardest hit;
The fans declared that Brownie had a magnet in his mitt;
Of Catcher Jones, the greatest of his day in all the land—
Could catch a game blindfolded and throw third with either hand.

According to the old fan, baseball now is worse than dead;
The merest mention of it makes him shake his hoary head.
But those who listen to him know his power of truth is spent,
For he allows that umpires then were all intelligent.
